

GERMAN DESTROYER SHIPS SUNK IN THE CHANNEL BY BRITISH

Spectacular Battle Takes Place With Ten of Kaiser's Raiders

EAST AND WEST BLAZES

German Forces Headed for Capital of Rumania; Verdun Is Storm Center.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The first open seas fight since the Jutland battle was fought in the English Channel last night between German and British "mosquito flotillas," when ten German destroyers, bent upon raising havoc among the British cross-channel service and troop transports, were engaged by British destroyers. A spectacular running battle ensued, the result of which preliminary reports issued today by the admiralty were as follows:

German losses—two destroyers sunk. British losses—destroyer Flirt missing. Nine men saved.

Destroyer Zuben disabled and later sank while being towed in.

The critical nature of war operations are still Rumania and Verdun.

The armies of the German allies driving upon Rumania from the north and east have both scored fresh progress, although they are meeting with stern resistance. Von Mackensen's forces that invaded Dobrudja have now reached Hirsova, 25 miles north of Cernavoda, at the bend of the Danube.

In the Transylvanian Alps the Austro-German army that is fighting its way to Campolungo, on the edge of the Rumanian plain, has driven back the Russo-Rumanian forces.

Violent fighting is in progress northeast of Verdun. The French attempt to take Fort Vaux have broken down under the furious fire of the Germans but progress has been scored west and south of the work. The Germans holding the fort are standing out very stubbornly before the driving blows of the French.

The counter offensive of the Germans in the Carpathians has been met with powerful blows by the Russians and Rumanians. The German attempt to separate the Russian and Rumanian armies has made only slight progress.

Bad weather is hindering operations in Macedonia.

HEAD FOR BUCHAREST.

Capital of Rumania is Next Objective of Germans.

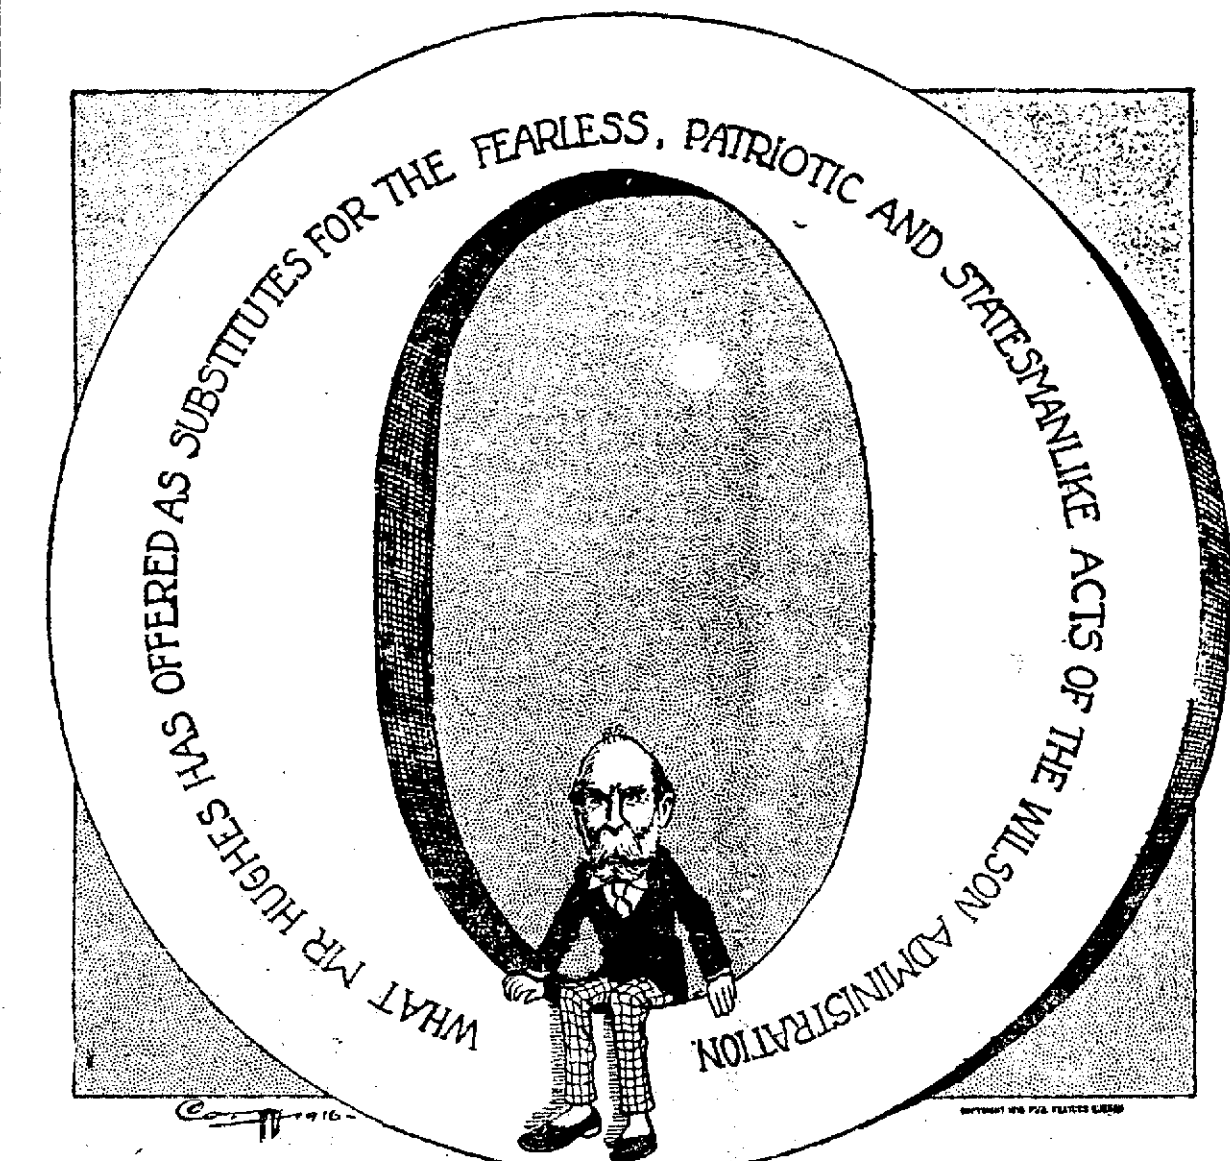

PARIS, Oct. 27.—A direct drive on Bucharest, the Rumanian capital, is the objective of the German armies under General Falkenhayn and Von Mackensen, in the opinion of French military experts. The war critics of the Journal, in writing of the Rumanian operations, says today:

"Von Mackensen has unquestionably attained his first objective—that of cutting rail communication between Bucharest and the sea. He now plans to follow up the pursuit of the retreating Russo-Rumanian forces in Dobrudja and then cross the Danube. His success up to date shows that the general plan of the German general staff is to cut the railroad between Cernowitz and Bucharest and isolate Rumania completely."

RCME, Oct. 27.—Russia is preparing to make a great effort to save Rumania. The salvation of the menaced kingdom is now foremost in the minds of the members of the Petrograd government. More troops and guns are being sent from Japan are being sent into the Rumanian theater of war to help the Rumanian army drive back the forces under Von Falkenhayn and Von Mackensen. It was reported here today that there are Japanese officers and a battery sent to the Rumanian war theater.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 27.—The father of Friedrich A. Her, the assassin of Count Stuergh, premier of Serbia, was arrested today, says a despatch from Vienna. Adler is charged with faking anti-Jewish agitation, but it is believed here that he was involved in the form of a

WILSON LAUDS UNITY OF AMERICAN SPIRIT AND RECEIVES GREAT OVATION

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT WILSON TO SHADOW LAWN, N. J., Oct. 27.—President Wilson, who is returning to the summer capital after the most forceful and significant speech of the campaign, is deeply moved over the reception he received in Cincinnati. He is especially pleased because Cincinnati is a city with a big German population.

To those who read between the lines of the president's speech there was a clear indication that he has begun to lose patience with certain foreign governments. The declaration that "the position of neutrals, sooner or later becomes intolerable," was taken as showing what the president really had in mind.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 27.—Cheering thousands yesterday greeted President Wilson, who made his first visit to this city since he has been president. The president made four speeches, which frequently were interrupted by applause, and received the plaudits of great crowds whenever he and Mrs. Wilson moved from point to point about the city.

Taking advantage of the strenuous visit to Cincinnati to discuss the relation of the United States to the European war, President Wilson declared that "this is the last war that involves the world that the United States can keep out of."

He gave as his reason his belief that "the business of neutrality is over" and that "war now" as such a scale that the position of neutrals sooner or later becomes intolerable.

He added that the nations of the world must get together and say, "Nobody can hereafter be neutral as respects the disturbance of the world's peace for an object which the world's opinion cannot sanction."

After denying the republican claim that the business prosperity of the United States in the last two years has been due to trade created by the war, the president refuted predictions that after the war Europe will overwhelm this nation by its economic strength and "dump" into the United States goods "now being stored up for that purpose."

He asserted that exports of everything going to supply armies make only 1 per cent of the total of American commerce.

"We ought not to turn to these people in fear, but in sympathy," said the president. He added:

"We have means of defense and we have means of aggression. Our means of defense are that we have taken pains to have all the instrumentalities to find out exactly what is going on, and to be ready to act immediately and find that it is necessary to defend ourselves."

"We are the clearing house for the sympathies of mankind."

"We are lending money to the rest of the world. If we are going to land money for trade wars after this war is over we will be denying our heritage."

"America, as a financial nation has this delicate duty of mediation; it must see to it that it lends its money for the advantage of mankind generally."

"The problem we are engaged in now is to see that our sympathies unite instead of divide us."

The president spoke of the Armenians, the Poles and other peoples who "are unorganized."

He told of the pleas of these people for food and succor.

"We can't carry food in for they are surrounded by cordons of steel," he said.

"We could crush some nations if we chose for we are powerful, but we want to help the small nations."

"America is made up out of the peoples of the world. What a future lies before a people which can interpret the rights of mankind everywhere."

Mentioning the federal reserve act, he said it placed credit before anyone who had authority.

"There was a time when you had to be known in influential quarters to get credit," he continued. "That is no longer necessary."

"We freed ourselves from guardianship in order that we might not commit the impertinence of guar-

MILTON SPYKER FOUND GUILTY OF ATTEMPTING TO ASSAULT AN OFFICER

Twelve Jurors Secured For Saxby Case at Two-Forty This Afternoon

JURORS IN SAXBY TRIAL.

E. O. Sawmiller, farmer; Samuel M. Pittilla, hat manufacturer; J. A. Mowery, farmer; Charles Braun, machinist; Ira Newell, salesman; William Hotz, farmer; Frank Roeder, coach maker; H. J. Reglin, locomotive engineer; George Middeltetter, clerk; Harry Whitler, planing mill employee; J. F. Cupp, engineer; A. H. Smith, Richland, farmer.

The jury which since Monday has heard the trial of the State of Ohio against Milton Spyker, indicted for assault on Sheriff Sherman E. Eley, for the purpose of lynching Charles Daniels, returned a verdict of guilty at 9:40 o'clock last night. They deliberated for five hours and 15 minutes, taking the case at 4:23 o'clock in the evening. There were but few persons in the court house when the jury reported.

Because of the return of Judge John P. Bailey, who heard the case, to his home in Ottawa, Judge William Klingler received the jury's report. The foreman of the jury was Newton Harpster, of Cairo. The verdict was read by Deputy Clerk J. F. Clem. Spyker was unmoved at the jury's finding.

The court instructed the jury that there were three ways in which they might bring in their verdict. They might say he was not guilty; he was guilty as charged in the indictment; or guilty of attempted assault. The jury found on this latter clause. Penalty is from one to ten years imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

SAXBY TRIAL STARTS.

The second trial set down for hearing in the case of the men indicted with Spyker was begun in court this morning, before Judge Bailey of Ottawa, and a jury. A venire of names had been drawn from which to select the jurors to serve today. When court recessed at 12:48 o'clock today, nine had passed the preliminary questions and kept their seats in the jury box. They were E. O. Sawmiller, farmer, of Cairo; J. B. Rischman, grocer, Lima; J. A. Mowery, farmer, North Township; Charles Braun, machinist, North Main street; Emmet Scott, farmer, Jackson township; A. S. Creps, insurance agent, West North street; C. D. Dunn, confederator at 50 North Main street, residing at 119 West 34th street; H. J.

Reglin, Lake Erie & Western locomotive engineer, residing at 904 Fairview avenue, and John Ricker, lumber dealer, Delphos.

Oscar N. Young, insurance agent, Lima, called as a juror, was disqualified because he said he had formed an opinion in the case. He was challenged by the state and dismissed by order of the defendant's attorney, Carl King, druggist, of Delphos, was not wanted by the defense for the same reason. Amos Eiley, Richland township farmer, was disqualified at the instance of the defense because he had formed an opinion.

E. D. Wentworth of Lima, dealer in electrical supplies, one of the jurors called, was challenged by the state because it was shown that only yesterday he was called by an unknown party and asked to figure on or install electrical fixtures in a room which was Saxby's former place of business. Mr. Wentworth said Saxby was present when he was called there, but did not discuss the case with him. Prosecutor Barr challenged Wentworth's qualifications to sit as a juror in the case.

It is believed that a jury will be secured early this afternoon and that state's witnesses in the case will be called to give their testimony.

SAXBY IN COURT.

Saxby is in court and at times will take a wonderful interest in the selection of the jurors which will decide his guilt or innocence. At times his mind seems to turn away from the case and become as a blank to his presence in the court room. His left arm hangs aimlessly by his side below his chair and when the name of Milton Spyker or the verdict of the jury is mentioned, Saxby nervously twitches his arm or fidgets in his chair. He is close to his attorney, William H. Leete, but converses with him only occasionally.

Opposite Saxby and within only a couple of feet sits Sheriff Eley, complainant in the case against Saxby. The courtroom was comfortably filled this morning with spectators, among whom were a few women. Many of those present in court are said to be old-time friends of Saxby. It was 9:14 o'clock this morning when Court Bailiff Polling rapped for order and the session was started. Saxby and his counsel were on hand early and apparently ready for the long siege which the case must pass.

Prosecutor Barr is much pleased with the action of the jury in the Spyker case. He believes the men did their duty to their state and country.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

When court convened in the afternoon, Attorney Leete asked that John Ricker, of Delphos, be dismissed, because of his inability to hear. George J. Middlestetter, residing at the Alta hotel, and employed at H. D. Allen's grocery and meat market, was called and subjected to the usual questions regarding qualifications.

Here Judge Bailey took occasion to lecture prospective jurors and tell them, while there might seem cause to state they had formed an opinion for the purpose of being excused from jury duty, he impressed upon them their duty as citizens.

Although Middlestetter was challenged by the state, the court overruled the challenge, after Attorney Leete had finished his questioning.

S. S. Coon, lumber dealer, of Lima, said that no evidence presented could make him think any in the mob were not guilty and he was dismissed.

FEDERAL POWER AIMED AT BORDER PLOTTERS IS WASHINGTON PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Complete denial that any Americans were implicated in the alleged plot to overthrow the Wilson administration by engineering an attack either upon American civilians or American border towns between now and election day, was made by Secretary of War Baker today. He declared emphatically that there was no thought of political expediency in making public his charges. On the contrary, he said, his action was taken with the intention of showing how the anti-Carranzista Mexican politicians in this country are endeavoring to complicate Mexican affairs.

At the same time Secretary of State Lansing announced that the Baker statement last night was made public at his (Lansing's) suggestion after all of the facts in the case as developed by the department of justice had been communicated to him by Secretary Baker. It is announced that the department of state, war and justice, are co-operating in the investigation now well under way and that arrests of persons alleged to be implicated in the alleged plot may shortly be made. These persons are said to be leaders in the followers movement in Mexico and of Felix Diaz.

In discussing the situation, Secretary Baker said:

"The obvious appropriate comment of the secretary of state on the announcement precludes any possibility of a misunderstanding. The announcement by me will have served its entire purpose if it does what Mr. Lansing suggests, break up the plans of publicity. Those people in Mexico who have been raiding the United States are opposed to the government's Mexican policy. The Mexican opponents of the de facto government of Mexico would be glad to complicate relations between the United States and Mexico and think this an appropriate time to do so. A large number of men who have withdrawn from Mexico are in this country constantly agitating against the government of Mexico."

"The statement made by the department ought to discourage any adventure on their part in that direction. It is unthinkable that political enemies of President Wilson's administration in the United States should be engaged in such activities. The only possible suggestion of a political purpose is to prevent people in Mexico from creating a disturbance of a political character in furtherance of their own designs."

Secretary Baker was asked whether the purposes of the Pershing expedition have been changed.

"They have not," he said.

"Will Pershing now be ordered to run down Villa and capture him as was originally intended?" the secretary was asked.

"I cannot answer that," was the reply. He refused to say where he received his information and declined to make any explanation why arrests had not already been made.

OHIO TROOPS RUSH TO BORDER

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 27.—A special to the Monitor from El Paso, Texas, says that the fourth Ohio infantry was ordered rushed to the border today to reinforce the fifth of Cleveland against a threatened border attack.

Colonel Byron L. Barger, commanding the fourth, at once started breaking up camp and by night half of his regiment will be patrolling the Rio Grande. The remainder of the regiment will go out early tomorrow morning. The fourth will be stationed by companies at points near El Paso.

The order sending out the fourth is said to be the result of Secretary of War Baker's information that a spectacular attack was to be made at some point along the border or on General Pershing's expedition before election day.

the instance of the defendant.

Harry Whistler, employed in planing mill and residing at 403 South West street, was called and his qualifications satisfied the state and defense.

E. D. Wentworth and J. F. Cupp of Lima, both passed examination for qualifications by the defense. Wentworth was excused because of Prosecutor Barr's challenge. Cupp is a surveyor.

Attorney Lee further questioned O. D. Dunn, who is a client of O'Connor Brothers. He was later excused.

Edward Bidwell employed by the Lima Locomotive corporation, and residing at 119 South Main street, was called and passed both the state and defense in their questions on qualifications.

Frank Roeder, employed at the C. H. & D. coach shops, and residing at 119 South Main street, was called and passed both the state and defense in their questions on qualifications.

Prosecutor Barr asked for the dismissal of J. B. Rieckman and this was granted.

J. W. Woodlake, of 784 South Elk street, was excused because he had formed an opinion.

Samuel M. Pittilla, hat manufacturer, 419 North Pierce street, was accepted by both state and defense.

A. S. Creps was dismissed at the instance of Saxby's counsel.

William Holz, farmer of Spencer township, passed examination.

Prosecutor Barr asked for dismissal of Edward Bidwell, because he said he was a patron of Saxby while he kept a saloon and also of his hat shop.

A. H. Smith, Richland township farmer, was next called.

WILSON LAUDS UNITY OF AMERICA

dianship to other people. Do not know how to take care of you and you know perfectly well I do not know how to take care of you."

The president was interrupted by cries of "Yes, you do," followed by cheering.

"No, my fellow citizens," he responded. "I only try to find out what you want me to do and do it."

"We have got to step out in the great arena. Some day we may have to use the physical force of this nation. Being the nation that we are, we cannot use it to promote aggression. Being the nation that we are we should use it to prevent aggression."

He repeated that the present war was due largely to secret intrigues.

"We have seen that the position of a neutral becomes almost intolerable. As between right and wrong there can be no neutrality."

"We must see that no nation goes to war for some cause not approved by the verdict of mankind."

"That's the kind of war I am willing to engage in."

"Other nations owe it to respect for the opinion of mankind to submit their cases to the opinion of mankind."

"I know that our nation will be willing to lend every dollar of her wealth, every ounce of her blood to the maintenance of the peace of the nations upon that foundation."

"We know that happiness lives in the atmosphere of peace. We are disciples of righteousness and we want peace because we know that righteousness cannot breathe any other air."

"Americanism is an intense devotion to those principles which make men devote their lives to one another. It means a great deal more to be an American than to belong to any other nation."

"The spirit of America is the spirit of co-operation. You cannot make a free people out of forces that do not combine. I care more for the love a man shows than for the love man professes."

Great applause greeted this declaration.

"If you really wish me to regard you as an American you must act like an American," Wilson continued. "If you do you will be recognized everywhere and if you do not you will be isolated and deserted everywhere."

"The problem of our politics—I am not speaking of the problem to be settled Nov. 7—" began the president, but he was interrupted by cries of "Wilson, Wilson."

"The seventh of November will come and go and be forgotten. Now let men lead you who are looking over their shoulders. Let men lead you who are looking forward."

"That's Woodrow Wilson," shouted a group in the crowd as Mr. Wilson smiled.

"But follow the men," continued the president, "who do not ask what is your race; what is your religion; who do not even ask what is your politics, but simply says, Are you Americans?"

President Wilson's visit to Cincinnati aroused all the enthusiasm his campaign manager could have desired.

Because of a determined fight for Ohio's twenty-four electoral votes being made by both parties, administration officials watched the spirit of the reception with especial attention. They expressed themselves as well pleased. Cincinnati's large foreign born population added interest to the visit.

Coming to Cincinnati to make four speeches, his stay was marked by an almost continuous ovation.

A shrill chorus of locomotive whistles in the railroad yards here as the president came in furnished an unusual feature of his reception. The railroad engineers and firemen stood on their engines and waved to Mr. Wilson.

Optimistic Thought.
Mutability of this world; in that to come there is no change.

JANE ADDAMS' FIRST VOTE WILL BE CAST FOR WILSON

Disregarded Publicist and Former Roosevelt Lieutenant Jerry Ills. Prevents Her from Actively Entering Campaign in President's Behalf.

One of the hardest of the many hard blows dealt the campaign for Mr. Hughes among women is the announcement that Miss Jane Addams, "America's Foremost Citizen," and one of Theodore Roosevelt's most effective lieutenants in 1912, is supporting President Wilson.

The disposition of Miss Addams' first Presidential vote, which she is to cast in Chicago on November 7 is naturally a matter of intense interest to every righteously American.

Miss Addams came into prominence in the councils of the Progressive party when Roosevelt first announced his choice for Republican avoirdupois and representatives of special privilege—a separation since annulled by mutual agreement. She became a member of the Committee of Nine which Roosevelt named as his special advisers in the 1912 campaign and had an important part in drafting the statement of Progressive principles, particularly the sections devoted to social justice, which played such an important part in the Progressive party platform. It was she who first put the phrases "social justice" and "industrial justice" into the American vocabulary.

Miss Addams is chairman of the National Woman's Peace Party. She feels that because of the humanitarian measures he has put upon the statute books, and his stand for broad humanity in all international affairs, President Wilson should receive the support of those who are sincerely endeavoring to improve the lot of the average American citizen.

In the years devoted to improving the status of the vast foreign-born population whose life centers in Hull House, Miss Addams became known first as Chicago's foremost citizen, and then as characterized by Roosevelt as the "Foremost Citizen of America."

When the Woman's Board of the Panama-Pacific Exposition last year to consider the women who were to be given high honors, they chose Miss Addams as one of the most noted women in the Western hemisphere.

Jane Addams, "America's Foremost Citizen."

In Miss Addams' own face-to-face comment she and the Colonel "parted company two years ago." For the last two months her response to the multitude of inquiries as to her vote has been that "one doesn't wait fifty years for a vote and then cast it without due deliberation." Miss Addams now declares:

"I shall cast my first Presidential vote for Woodrow Wilson. I am sorry I am too ill to enter the campaign actively and that all I can do is to vote for him."

LINER AFIRE, 300 ABOARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Advice received here state that the French liner Chicago with 300 passengers aboard, is on fire at sea and speeding for the Azores.

The Chicago sailed from Bordeaux on October 22, and is due here on November 1.

The message telling of the Chicago's plight was as follows:

"Steamship Chicago, Bordeaux for New York, has fire in hold No. 3. Expected to arrive Ayaz (Azores) today."

The Chicago, owned by the Compagnie Generale Trans-Atlantique, is of 11,207 tons and was built in 1907.

NEW TELEPHONE DEVICE.

In England there has appeared a new telephone device which renders possible the summoning of a subscriber back to the telephone after he has been asked to "hold the wire" while the party at the other end is looking up some desired information. The device is in reality a loud-speaking horn. If the subscriber called does not wish to hold the receiver to his ear he can place it over the horn and go about his duties. The calling party's voice is so amplified that he may be heard throughout a room.—Exchange.

OSTRICH FAIR IN NORTH.

The northernmost ostrich farm in the world is in a suburb of Stockholm. The birds were taken there last year. They spent the winter mostly in the open, in perfect health and toward the end of May the females laid their eggs, just as if they had been in South Africa. It takes six weeks to hatch an ostrich egg.—Exchange.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

The life habits of prehistoric man, as well as his antiquity on earth, are known almost entirely from fossil remains of various sorts. The data, however, are very scanty and insufficient for strictly logical deductions. Tools and hunting weapons, bones and tropical fauna and remains of man are found in the gravel beds of western Europe. Apparently man antedates the glacial period as this tropical fauna there was previous to the ice age and because remains of glacial fauna, together with human remains, occur in later geological deposits. Thus, the antiquity of man becomes a question of the date of the ice age and that occurred 60,000 years ago at least. The implements of prehistoric man form a basis of a division of early-inferred development into the stone age, the bronze age and the iron age.—Exchange.

A little girl from a more leisurely part of the country was walking with her mother along that part of Broadway which skirts the Woolworth building. It was the noon hour, and the crowd was out and in rapid motion. The air was strong and gusty and it scurried past as they do in that vicinity. "I don't like New York, mother," said the little girl. "Every thing is in such a hurry—even the wind."

JOHN R. LAWSON, OF WESTERN MINERS, SUPPORTS WILSON

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—John R. Lawson, the Colorado coal miner, who has grown to be one of the most loved and respected leaders of labor, and who came into national prominence during the Colorado strike, telegraphed today from Denver his reasons for supporting President Wilson for re-election. Said Mr. Lawson:

"I am for Woodrow Wilson because I believe him to be the first president since Abraham Lincoln who has been in fact, as well as in name, the president of all the people of the United States."

"I am for Woodrow Wilson because he is endowed with intelligence, courage and ability, successfully to cope with great problems, at home and abroad. He has demonstrated that with him, human rights come first, that the life of one American boy is worth more than the wealth of any man; that the place for the children of the poor is in the school-room and not in the mill or factory; that the shorter workday means more efficient workmen and happier homes; that industrial justice is the only remedy for industrial unrest, and that true preparedness means the teaching of mankind how to live instead of how to die."

THE RANGE OF LIGHT.

When I first enjoyed the superb new glow in April day, from the summit of the Pacheco pass, the Central valley, but little tramped or plowed as yet, was one furred, rich sheet of golden composite, and the luminous wall of the mountains shone in all its glory. Then it seemed to me the Sierra should be called not the Nevada, or Snowy Range, but the Range of Light. And after 10 years spent in the heart of it, rejoicing and wondering, bathing in its glorious floods of light, seeing the sunbursts of morning among the icy peaks, the noonday radiance on the trees and rocks and snow, the flush of the alpenglow, and a thousand dashing waterfalls with their marvelous abundance of fringed spray, it still seems to be above all others the Range of Light, the most divinely beautiful of all the mountain chains I have ever seen.—John Muir's "The Mountains of California."

Use Comparatively Few Words.

Prof. Max Muller, one of the greatest English authorities on language, says: "A well-educated person in England, who has been at public school and at the university, who reads Shakespeare, the Times and all the books of Middle's library, seldom uses more than about 3,000 or 4,000 words in actual conversation. Accurate thinkers and close reasoners who hold vague and general expressions and wait until they find the word that exactly fits their meaning, employ a larger vocabulary, and it is not surprising that a command of 10,000. The Holy Testament, for all it has to say in 5,042 words, Milton's works are built up with 6,000 words; and Shakespeare, who probably displayed a greater variety of expression than any writer in any language, produced all his plays with about three thousand words."

Example Counts.

A good light is never for its day alone. It is for many days; and it is not alone for him who bears its light, but for all who see it. So man can live his own life bravely and quietly and not be an enemy of social good, virtue proceeding from him to heal some brother's wounded heart.

DYE STUFF CENSUS DISPUTE MAKES DR. NORTON KNOWN

Yankee Born and Was Educated at Heidelberg, Germany.

Has Devoted Years to Study of Uses of Coloring Material.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 27.—"If I had a large family of children and they were all injured, I could not feel any worse," said Dr. Thomas D. Norton, as he cut another generous slice of information out of his dye-stuff census. "Thousands of dollars and weeks of hard labor were spent in gathering this material. I prepared it as thoroughly as any German chemist would have done—and now look!" He picked several proof sheets up from his desk and held them out. They were heavily marked with blue pencil.

The dye-census controversy has served to thrust Dr. Norton into the public limelight, and every day his office is crowded with reporters after news; artists who want to sketch him; and business men anxious to consult him about chemicals. For the time being he is one of the most interesting figures in the government. A broad-shouldered man of medium size, with alert brown eyes, a straight nose and a grayish-brown beard that completely covers the lower part of his face, the doctor is a combination of Yankee shrewdness and European suavity. No one but a Yankee would have conceived the idea of consulting the customs invoices of the nation to determine the quality of dyes required, and no one but a German would have thought of carefully tabulating the information and disseminating it among the business men of the country. In the doctor's case this is easily accounted for. He was born in New Haven and educated at Heidelberg.

When still a very young man Dr. Norton was manager of a big chemical works in Paris. There he became interested in the dye industry of Switzerland and Germany and made a complete study of the situation. A few years later he returned to America and was appointed as American consul to Harput, Turkey, where a new and important American consulate had just been established, and for a time he neglected his chemical studies. Instead he occupied his time on horseback through the surrounding countries of Armenia, Syria, Persia, Russia, Mesopotamia and the rest of Asia Minor, collecting rugs and making scientific notes on the industries. He also floated down the Tigris and Euphrates rivers on a couple of frail crafts made of goat-skin. Once an American was murdered in the mountain fastness of Persia and the doctor was ordered by President Roosevelt to ascertain the murderers and collect evidence to have them convicted. The doctor traveled in the disguise of a peasant and encountered some hazardous adventures, but finally succeeded in having the murderers punished and $20,000 indemnity paid the murdered man's widow.

From Turkey Dr. Norton was transferred to Chemnitz, Saxony, where he again became interested in chemicals. The chemical industries of Belgium, Holland and Scandinavia attracted him especially, so he made a tour of these countries and afterwards wrote a report on the subject, which was promptly translated by the Germans.

A month before the war broke out in Europe, the doctor was ordered back to America to take up his duties in the state department at Washington. With the declaration of war came the German embargo on the exportation of dyes, and the news that America was incapable of taking care of her home consumption. At that time Germany was supplying 74 per cent of the dye-stuffs of the world. No relief was to be found in France and England, which were facing the same situation as the United States. Alarmed at the possibility of a dye shortage and determined not to be caught in such a helpless condition again, the government started a campaign to encourage the manufacture of coal-tar dyes in this country. A government laboratory was established for the purpose of experimenting with various dye processes, and as each experiment proved successful the results were made public.

Shortly afterwards the German embargo on dyestuff shipments to America was lifted and the dyes were exported by way of Rotterdam, Genoa and other neutral ports. Until March of 1915, the German shipments continued to come forward. Then they again ceased. America was dependent on her own resources and chemists for colors. Fortunately, fashion that year decreed the elaborate use of white—white dresses, white shoes and white gloves—so that the strain on the advance supply of German dyes was somewhat abated, but several large textile mills were compelled to close entirely or in part on account of the shortage. One of the largest hosiery concerns in the country, for example, was forced to release one thousand of its employees while 160,000 dozen pairs of hose were on the shelves awaiting dyes. Ordinarily this firm required 500 pounds of dyestuffs daily to supply the needs of its business. By October 1, 1915, its stock of colors had sunk to half a barrel, and with considerable difficulty it managed to secure a ton of aniline oil to use for aniline black, at the cost of $150 a pound—a few months before the price had been 10 cents a pound.

During this time several small dyestuffs establishments had grown up in different parts of the country to supply four factories that were manufacturing animal and vegetable dyes at the outbreak of the war. Up to then, America had paid very little attention to the by-products of its natural resources, and coal was no exception. The government now took, through the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, to interest capital and enterprise to enter the field of coal-tar chemistry, to increase the supply of coal-tar "crudes," to multiply the production of intermediates, and to broaden and intensify the output of American-made, finished dyestuffs. A man was needed who understood both the chemical and commercial units of the industry as it was practiced in Europe. There was one man in the government who knew all this, who had traveled through the various countries studying that particular industry, who had managed a chemical works himself, and who understood the methods employed by the Germans in securing their dyestuffs monopoly. This man was Dr. Norton of the state department.

The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce asked permission to borrow him. He was installed in new offices in the Commerce buildings and asked to write what he knew about the dyestuffs situation, with particular attention to the development of coal-tar chemicals. The doctor hastened to issue his reports on the subject which thoroughly covered it. In spite of the encouragement given by the government, however, the manufacture of dyestuffs in this country did not progress as rapidly as desirable. Capital was afraid of the investment. American business men feared that after they built up a dyestuffs trade in this country the end of the war would release the dyes of the German manufacturers, who would immediately start to undersell them.

There was also another difficulty. The manufacturers did not know enough about the consumption of dyes in this country to increase their output rapidly. What colors were needed most? What trades required them? What was the particular demand of each particular trade? It had taken the Germans many years to answer these questions, and it would also take American manufacturers a long time unless some direct method were discovered. Dr. Norton suggested taking a dye census from the customs invoices.

This census was authorized and Dr. Norton was placed in charge of it. With the permission of the secretary of the treasury all the invoices covering the imports of artificial colors into this country for 12 months, ending June 30, 1914, were sent to a certain central point, where the necessary information was transcribed. The weight, value and price of each invoice was recorded, requiring some 37,500 different entries. A large force of assistants was employed, and the census hurried through as quickly as possible. With the proofs in his pocket, Dr. Norton attended the convention of the American Chemical society held in New York. The proofs were placed on exhibition.

Suddenly there was a storm of protest. The government was accused by certain influential individuals of abusing its authority in giving trade secrets, and it was demanded that the census be suppressed. Secretary Redfield ordered Dr. Norton back to Washington where he was informed that certain facts must be eliminated from the census before it could be made public.

An expurgated copy of the census will be printed before long, and American business men are eagerly awaiting its distribution. The eliminations made will be as follows: "In cases where some color is manufactured and exported by more than one foreign firm quantities and values of individual exports will not appear. Only the amount and value of total imports of color in question will be given. In cases where a color is manufactured and exported to the United States by a single firm only the quantity will be given and no data regarding its value." While the blue pencil has cut out a great deal of valuable material, the report is by no means useless. It is still the greatest encouragement that has yet been given to the American dyestuff industry.

THE IDLER

Servise Director Al Metheany yesterday purchased four lots adjoining the water works pumping station as the site of the water filtration plant, at a cost of $1,400.

According to Dr. A. L. Jones, city health officer, the water piped from the reservoir to various parts of the city is safe, but of high bacterial count. Tests were taken of the water in six parts of the city.

More than two special car loads of members of the local order of the Eagles will go to Piqua, Sunday morning to take part in interesting ceremonies in that city.

Sincerity is the most commendable wisdom and an excellent instrument for the speedy dispatch of business; it creates confidence in those we have to deal with, saves the labor of many inquiries, and brings things to an issue in a few words; it is like traveling in a plain beaten road which commonly brings a man sooner to his journey's end than byways.—Addison.

HELD ON CHARGE OF NON SUPPORT

Thomas W. Avery, arrested on a charge of not providing for his two children, Alice, 8, and Arnold, 7, only 10 years old, was held in the court this morning and pleaded not guilty. His bond was set at $300. The date of the hearing was set for this afternoon at 3:30.

CAN WHITE CATS HEAR?

The acuteness of the average cat's sense of hearing is proverbial, but it is a proverb that needs qualifying. For example, many white cats are said to be absolutely deaf, and though the idea may appear absurd at first sight, it is believed by some students that the color of a cat is associated with its sense of hearing. Among several imported Persians, or long-haired cats, from abroad, not one white one in the number has been able to hear the slightest sound. Of course, there are white cats that can hear, but they have been as much to the short-haired gets of the feline as to the aristocratic long-hair of the shows.—Exchange.

WESLEY AND ADDISON.

How we all wish that Paul had kept a diary, like Wesley and Ashbury and George Muller! What wonderful reading it would have made! A friend of mine, a successful novelist and poet, told me that one time, while stopping at a farmhouse he found the volumes of Wesley's Journal. They were almost the only books available, so he spent considerable time with them. As he read, he told me he could not help feeling: was a pity that literary critics had spent so much time praising the works of essayists like Addison, when here was literature written at that same period in English letters which had equal splendor and perfection of style, and yet contained material so infinitely much more worth while.—Christian Herald.

BETWEEN SHYLOCK AND MAHOMET.

Just 20 years ago an American woman who had ventured to dine in a popular Parisian cafe without ordering wine was charged extra for her eccentricity, and, on account of her abstinence, was claimed as a convert to Mohammedanism by a member of the Turkish embassy dining at an adjacent table.

This adventure led to the search for and discovery of a little cafe—the only one in all Paris—where wine was not sold, and so small and unknown was it that it seemed a mere rushlight in the encircling darkness of the universal wine-drinking customs of the French people.

The proprietor was a woman and this was the beginning of a feminist temperance movement in France which forecasts a wineless nation.—The Christian Herald.

CENSUS OFFICIAL UNDER TAFT, NOW STRONG FOR WILSON

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—Willard E.

Hitchhikes dean of the northwestern university school of commerce, a life long republican who has been supervisor of the census in the Chicago district under president Taft in 1910 has definitely announced his decision to vote for Woodrow Wilson. Prof. Hitchhikes' reason for voting for Wilson instead of Hughes are based primarily upon the Wilson record of achievement and follow in part. "I climbed down off the fence about two weeks ago. I am for Wilson. I make this statement because I believe it is the duty of a citizen to show his colors. I was raised in New York and have always been interested in New York politics. When I was still a student at Cornell I began to develop Hughes enthusiasm. I followed Hughes' career before he was governor and while he was governor with great admiration. I still think he was one of the great-est governors New York ever had. I feel too that his utterances from the bench, generally speaking, have had a forward ring. When it comes to legislation the case is clear. No one but a great leader could have put through congress such an array of wise constructive measures and some of them were long overdue when Wilson became president. I know of no finer evidence of statesmanship than the way in which the democratic congress under Wilson's leadership accepted the results of the careful monetary study of the Aldrich commission and enacted a law which embodied the correct monetary principles contained in the Aldrich report. This was the work of Woodrow Wilson. I did not believe that the democratic party in 1912 was thinking in national terms. But now we have the evidence whatever its history, whatever it may do in the future, however much it may employ Jeffersonian phraseology.

Here and now, under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson the democratic party is the party which has borne the fruits of national policy, a policy for advancing the welfare of all the people."

LEARNED JUDGES
The patient lay at death's door, laboring for his scant breath. One thing could save, one only. This one thing—a new and radical operation we shall say—his brave and practical physician did. The patient recovered, a satisfying fact to himself and his dependent family. Immediately after this remarkable surgical achievement—horror! Rather than perform that particular operation in that particular way, the patient should have been allowed to die—so said a faction among the successful surgeon's learned brethren. "Scat! Out with him, down with him, scourge him forth, hold him in aid! Any operation to save life? Why, that is the path to disaster!"
And so say the learned Judges Hughes and Falt today of the successful operation by that skillful and successful surgeon, Woodrow Wilson, in preventing loss, hunger and death in the United States by averting the railway strike. And "T. R. joins in the protesting clamor upon the ground, apparently, that the man who stops any kind of a fight gains his everlasting displeasure. It fortunately happens, however, that the patient for whom Woodrow Wilson operated was the public of the United States, and the public of the United States outnumbers the learned judges, does not lust for blood and killings, and is guided by plain homely common sense. Indeed, the public perceives that the learned judges, if they really mean what they say, are bent upon undoing the operation and placing the patient right where he was before at death's door, laboring for his scant breath—a fate from which the patient for reasons wholly his own recoils.
BUSINESS SERENE
The volume of business that already is sweeping many Chicago houses will be increased after the presidential election no matter who is elected, according to a circular issued last week by the National City Bank of Chicago, at which David R. Forgan is president. Forgan is a Republican and an ultra-conservative in financial and political matters. The bank has discovered that the country is so busy and prosperous that it has had little time to talk politics.
"The American people generally are enjoying prosperity upon a scale which the country has never seen before," is one declaration in the statement.
"It is probable that a great deal of increased business will be given after the election is held. This will apply, whatever the outcome of the election itself, since in presidential years a great volume of business is usually held back until the contest has been decided. The campaign itself, however, has had almost no effect upon general business this year. It has been conducted in an orderly way and without the excitement which often unsettles general trade at a time when a president is being voted for."
"All previous records for total resources for the San Francisco branch of the Federal Reserve Bank," said the San Francisco Journal of Commerce, have been smashed by the statement issued today as for the close of business for the week ending last night. The total resources in the statement issued today are $34,942,000. This is an increase of $432,000 over last week and of almost a million over the week before.
The utter hopelessness of the situation in Ohio in regard to Hughes was demonstrated this week at a meeting of the state republican strategy board. It is found that Chairman Hatfield is unable to stem the tide. Future conduct of the fight in Ohio will rest largely in the hands of Walter F. Brown, former Republican state leader, who turned Progressive, and who is now coming back to handle the Hughes distribution. It is understood that the plan now is to employ workers, each one of whom will be required to secure the pledge of five men who are not now for the Republican ticket, that they will vote for it on election day. In state political circles there is no secret that county organizations have been drifting away from both the state and national tickets, and that they are now making a stand in the hope that they may elect a part of their county tickets. The Herriek supporters, who have hitherto furnished the money for the campaign, are resentful of the fact that Governor Willis has been conducting an extremely selfish campaign, and from now on they will let him go his way. Walter Brown is in league with the Herriek organization and it is understood in touch with those who represent Theodore Roosevelt outside Ohio. In private conversation none but the paid Hughes workers express any hope of little success this year. But the intention, and the effort will be, to bring out of the week a skeleton upon which a new Republican state organization will be builded for the future.
Ohio Republican leaders belittled the statement of Henry Ford in endorsement of President Wilson, charging that Ford had not voted regularly in recent elections. This is an awful charge but we ought to remind those Republicans that candidate Hughes has not cast a ballot since 1910. Every follower of progressive government knows that all progressive measure including the election of United States senator by the people; the income tax; the initiative and referendum and the workmen's compensation law have come into governmental affairs since Justice Hughes ceased to vote.
Business is better now than it ever was before in the United States. But that is why some Republicans want a change.
GOOD EVENING You missed The Times-Democrat when it was delayed last evening.

PUBLIC FORUM
THE UNITED STATES NAVY.
To the Editor of The Times-Democrat.
Col. Roosevelt has often declared that the United States ought to have a navy second in sea power in the world. But republican congresses gave little heed to the demand for a larger navy. Even the colonel, while president did not propose or recommend any measure for strengthening the naval establishment.
The sixty-third congress, upon the recommendation of President Wilson, has made liberal appropriation for building ships, and eight battle ships are now under construction. and 157 were authorized by the last session of congress. More than $5,000,000 have been appropriated for the building of aircraft under Mr. Taft's administration no names were provided under Mr. Wilson the mines were increased 450 per cent, and a training division was created. Admirals Mayo and Fletcher say that the target practice is perfect, and that the efficiency of the navy has been much increased.
A naval consulting board has been appointed above duty it is to seek for and obtain the best inventive genius to devise means to increase the efficiency of the naval arm of the military service.
Compare what has been done by President Wilson's administration to ships are now under construction, strengthen and promote the efficiency of the navy with what was done under republican rule, and the final judgment must be in favor of this administration.

CARACAS.
Caracas has been called the Paris of South America. There is something vaguely familiar about this Buenos Ayres and Rio have been called the Paris of South America, too and so have some ten or a dozen other cities. If the visitors will not call a South American capital the western Paris, the people of the city will do it for him. They would rather have their town called Paris than London or New York.
Caracas could not remind any traveler of Paris if he had even seen Paris. It might look like Paris to a man who had never been to France, because the people take such a generous interest in things Parisien. They discuss the happenings of the boulevard over their tables and in their papers as though France were just over the way. This in spite of the fact that France and Venezuela have not always been on the best of terms. It is a part of the peculiar power of Paris, however, that even the enemies of the country of which she is the capital must continue to admit her power and charm.
We are considering Caracas, however, and not the capital of France. Caracas may be summed up as a snug little capital, beautifully situated, rather escanned from the world and taking herself with great seriousness. The foreign business man or diplomat is occasionally a cynical figure who pretends to see that all of Caracas is more or less an imitation of the real thing, but at bottom he is only jealous because he cannot surrender to the prevailing illusion that the little plots are likely to change the course of empires, that the exorable politicians are not so earnest port-makers Keats and Shakespeare on their thrones.
With all this, Caracas has something of the continental charm. The elegant life of leisure is built on a foundation of toiling mestizos and peons of course, but that elegant life is sparkling and colorful in a most attractive way. There are worse things for a city than the ambition to emulate Paris.

50 LIVES LOST WHEN HOSPITAL IS DESTROYED

FARNHAM, Que., Oct. 27.—It is now believed that between 40 and 50 persons lost their lives in the burning of St. Elizabeth hospital instead of 19 as reported last night.

Between 20 and 30 persons, mostly aged inmates of the institution, were caught by the falling walls.

The heroine of the fire is Sister Benoit, one of the nuns in charge of the hospital. She saved 45 lives at the risk of her own. While the flames were raging about her she stood at one of the windows passing children out to the firemen.

William Sifton, a 14 year old boy, saved six little children by carrying them from the burning building on his shoulders.

Incendiarism is now suspected for three more fires broke out last night. Damage to the hospital is estimated at $135,000.

Stops Nose Bleed.
Take a small piece of cotton; saturate it with vinegar, and insert in the nostril that is bleeding. Let it stay for a few minutes, when the bleeding will cease entirely.

Expensive Luxury.
"So old Williams is looking for a divorce from his young wife. On what grounds?" "On the grounds of economy, I guess."

HIS BURDEN.
"I've got a big notion to quit the hotel business," declared the landlord of the Petunia Tavern. "What with provisions higher than a cat's back and climbing every minute a and the drummers yelling like starved dragons for the best on the market, and guests kicking about this, that and the other like skeletons having fits on tiled floors, and the young ladies that kindly consent to wait table for me squabbling like catamounts over the merits of their respective fellers, and such as that, it is enough to eradicate a person clear out of his mind. And what's worse than all the rest is the way the lead pencils go. Every day or two I buy a new one, and every thing a guest registers with it and then puts it in his pocket and I have to buy another. Dabbed if I couldn't quit business and live on the savings in lead pencils!"—Exchange.

Biggest Natural Bridges.
The biggest natural bridges in the world are to be found in the United States, according to the National Geographic Magazine. The largest of these, the Rainbow, 308 feet high, would span the dome of the United States capitol, with room to spare, and is nearly as high as the Flatiron building in New York. Its span is six times as great as that of the Natural Bridge of Virginia. Utah alone has three natural bridges that are higher and of greater span than any other natural bridge in the world.

Useless Suggestion.
"Is your boy Josh going to stay on the farm?" "I'm afraid so," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "I've bought him all the stories I could find about boys who run away and come back on Christmas eve with money enough to pay off the mortgage. But he doesn't seem to take any of 'em to heart."

NATIONAL SUPPLY, TAKES MECHANICS LIEN ON EAST CO.

Ira C. Taber as attorney of the National Supply company of this city on September 16 this year filed a mechanic's lien against the East Iron and Machine company for the sum of $22,727.71 which it is claimed is due the National Supply company for labor and machinery furnished and for constructing, altering, erecting, improving and repairing of a contract between the two companies.

The lien on the property and machinery of the company is asked by the plaintiff in the case. The plaintiff also asks that interest on the amount of the lien be due after June 1. Legal proceedings in regard to the lien were sworn to before a notary of public in Lucas county.

Elephants Not Cowards.
The fear an elephant has for a rat has often been spoken of as an example of colossal cowardice. But it is nothing of the kind. The elephant, when captive and in chains, has every reason to regard with terror the little rodent, which, in the still watches of the night, gnaws the toenails of the helpless pachyderm. Not much of this sort of thing is required to make the huge creature lame. By such attack, not long ago, three young elephants belonging to Hagenback's outfit were so badly injured that they had to be shot.

Training Children.
Do not be afraid of letting your children enjoy themselves. Make them just as happy as you possibly can, even if they do break a piece of furniture or a little bric-a-brac once in a while. It is infinitely more important to train children to cultivate a happy temperament to try to establish in them the hopeful, cheerful, optimistic habit, than to give them a college education or leave them a fortune. It is infinitely more important to show them how to face life heroically, cheerfully, serenely, than how to make money or to attain fame.—The Mother's Magazine.

Choose Your Own Plan.
He who lets the world choose his path of life for him has no need of any other faculty than the apellike one of imitation. He who chooses his own plan for himself employs all his faculties.—John Stuart Mill.

PRINCE HENRY BECOMES RAND-ADMIRAL OF NAVY

According to Berlin dispatches, Prince Henry of Prussia, eldest brother of the Kaiser, has been awarded the highest naval honor by being made a grand-admiral of the German navy. It is probable that the appointment is merely an honorary one, for thus far Prince Henry has taken no part in the war.

SAFETY EXHIBIT CAR WILL BE IN LIMA DURING TWO DAYS

Is in Charge of the State Industrial Commission.
Public Urged to Visit and Inspect the Latest Devices.

The safety exhibit car of the industrial commission of Ohio was loaned to the commission by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company. The exhibits were donated by the various employes throughout the state. The car is to be in Lima for exhibition Saturday, October 28, and Sunday, October 29. It will be open for inspection, 11 a. m. to 5 p. m., and 7 p. m. to 9 p. m., each day, south of Wayne street, and C. H. & D. depot.

The car is sent out under the direction of Victor T. Noonan, director of safety of the Ohio industrial commission. The car is in direct charge of Pearl T. Zimmerman, assistant director of safety, and Bernard Ashby, special representative of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Among the more important exhibits are a display of slides showing dangerous practices, safeguards, sanitation, etc., donated by the Carnegie Steel Company; a picture showing the plant, surroundings and employes of the National Cash Register Company; a display of goggles, the effect of wearing them, and the loss incurred without using them by the Ralston Steel Car Company; a display of a horizontal cross section of plant, showing safeguards, sanitation and good order by the American Rolling Mills Company; standard safeguards as used in various machinery, by the Republic Rubber Company; a sanitary emergency hospital equipment of the Columbus Asseptic Furniture Company; a map showing location and number of deaths caused by accidents in the state during the last 18 months; a pneumatic pulmotor; type lathe machine with all modern safeguards; safety electric switch; safeguards for buzz saw; helmet for electric welding adopted by the Pennsylvania Company; safety scaffolds for use in

BRITISH COMMANDER IN INDIA RECALLED TO LONDON

General Sir Beauchamp Duff, British commander in India, has been summoned to London to give evidence before the Mesopotamia commission. General Duff, who has a brilliant military record, has been commander-in-chief in India since 1917. He took part in the organization of the expedition into Mesopotamia which ended in the surrender of the British army after the siege of Kut-el-Amara and of the expedition into German East Africa, which has not completely accomplished its purpose.

The Daily Chronicle of London, in commenting upon the recall of General Duff, says, "For the time his brilliant military career has undoubtedly been obscured by the deplorable fallings of the Indian military organization in this war, first in East Africa and afterward in Mesopotamia."

Detent director of safety, and Bernard Ashby, special representative of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Among the more important exhibits are a display of slides showing dangerous practices, safeguards, sanitation, etc., donated by the Carnegie Steel Company; a picture showing the plant, surroundings and employes of the National Cash Register Company; a display of goggles, the effect of wearing them, and the loss incurred without using them by the Ralston Steel Car Company; a display of a horizontal cross section of plant, showing safeguards, sanitation and good order by the American Rolling Mills Company; standard safeguards as used in various machinery, by the Republic Rubber Company; a sanitary emergency hospital equipment of the Columbus Asseptic Furniture Company; a map showing location and number of deaths caused by accidents in the state during the last 18 months; a pneumatic pulmotor; type lathe machine with all modern safeguards; safety electric switch; safeguards for buzz saw; helmet for electric welding adopted by the Pennsylvania Company; safety scaffolds for use in construction of buildings; transpiration pictures donated by the B. & O. showing dangerous practices, etc. The entire exhibit is valued at $15,000.

Ohio is the first state in the union to have a safety exhibit car. Requests have been received from a number of the states to have the car brought to their state for exhibit, of course the exhibits have all been refused. The exhibit is distinctly an Ohio product and should be visited by every woman and child in Ohio. It is to be taken to Washington, D. C., December 12, for inspection by President Woodrow Wilson and his cabinet. All employers, employees, and the general public are extended a cordial invitation to visit the car.

The purpose of the car is to educate both the employers and employees to use "safety first" in all their work. Under the old liability system the employer paid the liability companies primarily to keep him out of litigation, needless to say that the employees received no compensation for their injuries under this system, consequently there existed a wide difference between the employer and employee. Under the workman's compensation law the employer receiving even better protection than under the liability system, and the employees receiving compensation for their injuries. This has a tendency to bring the employer and the employee to a common understanding.

The safety exhibit car is only another step to bring the employer and the employee to a more mutual understanding, for decreased accidents mean decreased rates to the employer, and decreased accidents mean godsend to the employees.

HAD LONG MEMORY FOR SINS

FINDLAY, O., Oct. 27.—Two men dropped into Charles H. Smith's office yesterday and each threw a 50-cent piece on his desk, saying they were conscience stricken. They had ridden on a city car 20 years ago, but because they were compelled to stand, they beat the conductor. Smith turned the money over to the Associated Charities.

THE RASPBERRY

By OLIVE KENNSET.

When Blair Tuttle's sister Maud came home from finishing school she unquestionably had been thoroughly finished.

Maud had always been content to wear hats that came from Mrs. Crindle's, but since she had brought home two hats from Madam Rose's in New York she hadn't any use for Crindle's style.

"Isn't that the most impossible hat you ever saw," she said one day when she was passing Mrs. Crindle's with that big, good-hearted brother of hers, who was now in the graduating class at Truxdale, captain of the football team and one of the most popular men.

"It looks just like a raspberry sundae and it is quite as insipid and absurd."

Blair was more attentive to Maud's little tirade than she had expected.

"You ought to know, I suppose," agreed Blair. "Now, I'll tell you why I am interested. You know our senior play. Of course, no one is supposed to know what it is about, but I have got to get your help. For some reason, I am in charge of the costumes. I have got to see that the fellows get the right sort of thing to wear for their parts. Now, one of the characters is a young gawk of a country girl, and her part calls for just the kind of thing that you seem to think that raspberry-sundae hat stands for. I was thinking maybe I'd get you to trim up something for me, but I guess you couldn't do any better than that hat."

"Oh, Blair, it would be the hit of the show."

Maud agreed to buy the hat for her brother.

Caste lines were but loosely drawn in Truxdale. The minister's daughter had felt no hesitancy in marrying the son of the grocer on the corner, the young doctor felt it an honor to know the daughter of old Dobbs, who drove the station wagon.

So Clarice Higgins came in for her share of the college fun—little bright-eyed, slender Clarice, who had been known to every sweet-toothed boy in college as the dispenser of his favorite brand of soda water or sundae.

But Clarice had cherished ambition. There was not enough scope for her imagination in the task of soda dispenser. So when an apprentice was needed at Crindle's millinery shop she left the fountain on a day's notice. Blair Tuttle could but feel a satisfaction in knowing that hereafter those bright eyes of hers would shine only for haughty Mrs. Crindle and her other assistants or the occasional woman shoppers who came in to try on the new millinery.

"I am so perfectly happy tonight," Clarice told Blair when he called at her boarding house to take her to the movies, that single source of evening diversion in Truxdale. "The most wonderful thing has happened. My hat—my very own hat—that I worked on so hard has been sold. I didn't see the young lady that bought it, but the girl who waited on her said she looked like a fashion plate, with a hat that must have come from New York. Isn't that wonderful?"

Blair had more than once before tried to get his courage up to tell the high-spirited little girl that she was part of his own plans for happiness and that in the career he was about to start after his graduation from college he needed her encouragement more than anything.

"But, Clarice, I don't want you to be independent. I don't want you to go on this way."

Clarice was too full of the enthusiasm of achievement to be still.

"I do wish you had seen it before it was sold, that hat of mine. The silk was just the color of the raspberry sirup we used at the fountain."

Suddenly Blair realized that this masterpiece of Clarice's was none other than the property hat he had at present stowed away in his own room. What Maud had said to him about it came back with vividness. What if Clarice knew? What if she ever found out that this hat on which she had spent so much thought and care, and on which she had banked such hopes of future success, was bought only because it was a caricature? Blair tried to think of a scheme whereby her feelings might be saved.

"Do you know, Clarice, my own sister, the one who has been away to boarding school, bought that hat. She noticed it the first thing. I must get you two girls to meet each other some time. I know you will be great friends. I believe Maud is going away visiting this summer sometimes, and she wanted that raspberry hat to go with one of her new dresses. You ought to have heard what she said about it! I guess it is most too pretty to wear around here in Truxdale. But Clarice, you don't want to go on with that millinery business idea of yours. You know what I am driving at. Two or three of the seniors are going to be married right after college closes. Commencement is next week, and then the senior play will come the next night. I have got to stay around for that—I'm the costumer and there is quite a bit to do—but, tell me, Clarice, will you marry me the very next day. And then when I start out on that new job of mine I won't have to go alone."

Her acceptance of his proposition helped Blair very materially out of the raspberry-sundae hat difficulty. (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

HOSPITAL GETS $5,000.

Trustees of the Lima City hospital met yesterday to receive $5,000, willed the institution by E. E. Leeman, former Lima grocer, who died in California about two years ago. Roeman left the money at the hospital as an endowment fund, only the interest to be used each year.

MRS. VINCENT ASTOR. Photo by Campbell Studios, N. Y.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Mrs. Vincent Astor is being hailed as a "sure enough fire chief" today by neighbors adjoining her father's estate near here, as a result of her efforts in heading a bucket brigade of employes which overcame a fire that threatened to destroy the home of Edward H. Landon, a New York lawyer.

Mrs. Astor was staying at the her father, when the fire broke out she gathered together employes of the Huntington estate, Ogden Mills estate and the estates of other members of the Staatsburg-Rhinebeck millionaire colony, and directed them in fighting the flames. The damage amounted to about $65,000.

PAPER PATTERNS SELL PIANOS.

The newest plan of selling pianos is by means of paper patterns. The salesman is provided with paper patterns showing the exact size of the piano. These enable him to demonstrate accurately to prospective customers the space the instrument will occupy in the room, an often disputed problem that hinders the sale of an instrument sometimes and at others involves moving the piano into the house only to find that insufficient space has been allotted to it. With his paper patterns, which also present the color of the wood, the salesman is able to give a clear idea of how the piano will appear in the home.

This is a favorite remedy for croup with many mothers, and is pleasant and safe to take. Obtainable everywhere. m-w-1

Little Walter's uncle was attached to the commissary department. Naturally, little Walter wanted to know what that meant. His father explained that it was the commissary's duty to supply the soldiers with food and drink and the like. The very next day a lady came to call and asked Walter how his Uncle Paul was. "He's fine," said the young man. "He's a waiter now."

Fifty Women of New York Grateful for the Child Labor Law.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Fifty mothers of New York's east side, with their children, who have been emancipated from sweat shops by the enactment of the child labor law, are going to Shadow Lawn, Saturday, in person to thank President Wilson. A "kind lady" who prefers thus to conceal her identity, has donated a special car to be attached to one of the trains bearing pilgrims from New York to Shadow Lawn to hear the president's address on "Wilson Day."

The children will carry arms full of artificial flowers which they used to make in the factories before their emancipation. The hostess of this unique party suggested today to the democratic national committee that Saturday should be celebrated all over the United States as "child emancipation day."

Children of the tenements have been wildly excited since tickets for this excursion were distributed yesterday.

No such pilgrimage of the children of the poor has been attempted since the one when Theodore Roosevelt was president of the United States and a car-load of children from the Pennsylvania coal mines journeyed to the summer capital at Oyster Bay to petition for a national child labor law. "Mother Jones" who conducted that excursion, told recently in public of the refusal of the guards at Oyster Bay to allow the children to pass the outer gate, and of their returning home to wait 14 years for a Woodrow Wilson to set them free.

THIS RUGS STORY READS LIKE A ROMANCE.

Few people realize the time and thought back of a selling event of this nature. To sell rugs in the regular way is a very common place matter, but to go into the market and with your associates contract for a mill's entire output for one whole year, is not only a big undertaking, but a splendid demonstration of our confidence in the public's appreciation of true values when they are presented to them.

WE HAVE KEPT THIS MILL BUSY FOR SIX MONTHS.

And for another six months this mill will be busy turning out the balance of the combined purchase of our store and associate stores. There was a two-fold advantage in buying these rugs under this condition. First, we were able to secure a price lower than we have ever bought Tapestry Brussels Rugs of similar character for in the past, and secondly, we were able to know definitely the exact quality of these rugs. We knew exactly the texture used, we knew exactly the colorings, etc.

THEY ARE ALL EXACT COPIES OF TRUE ORIENTAL DESIGN.

We selected these designs from among the best known Oriental patterns, classic designs that are familiar to everyone, but usually found only in the most expensive Wilton Rugs, and are therefore an innovation in rugs selling at this price.

COLORINGS HARMONIZE WITH EVERY DECORATION.

So varied are the designs and color combinations that, no matter what particular decorative scheme you wish to follow out, you can select a rug that will harmonize perfectly with any interior decoration.

OUR PERSONAL GUARANTEE ACCOMPANIES EVERY RUG.

Knowing so much of the details of these Rugs, we can guarantee them with a greater degree of confidence than if these rugs were bought in the ordinary way.

NONE SOLD TO DEALERS

We realize that this sale presents an inducement to the average dealer in rugs who can purchase these rugs from us at this special price and sell them for a considerably higher price later on, but we do not wish to encourage this practice. We want our customers to profit by this event. We have risked much to secure this rug value for them, and we want to confine its benefits to them.

$2.00 PLACES ANY RUG ON YOUR FLOOR.

As an added inducement to the specially low price we will grant the unusual low credit terms of $2.00 cash and $4.00 monthly on any of these rugs, which is nearly as remarkable as the special sale price. You can readily understand that if these rugs were not of the very highest quality we would not be foolhardy enough to sell them at this low price and under these low credit terms.

BEAUTY IN THE SCHOOL

THE House Beautiful we hear much about, and everywhere pencil, brush, and skillful tool are active in its realization. The City Beautiful is not yet a dream come true, but we are nearer to its consummation than we were ten years ago. A great step toward both the former ideals has been taken in the endeavor to bring out the School Beautiful. Slowly has it unfolded in the consciousness of those who build schools and regulate their affairs that much save utility needs to be considered in the inside and the outside of a school building. Not yet has it been borne in upon the conviction of all the school boards of our land that beauty and joy are essential elements in education. They for the most part, and this is, unfortunately, indifferently accepted in the community en masse, are willing to leave to the efforts of large-hearted women the task of trying to cover up the ugliness within and without the school building, which work these women do because they realize that beauty and joy should fill the atmosphere of the school home just as much as it should that of the household. For they have come to see, and this awakening is becoming widespread that so intimately are the home and the school coupled in their effect upon each other and upon the community that there must be an interchange of atmosphere and activity between them, to effect the best results in the community.

An awakened realization of the need for this expression of beauty in home and school is manifesting itself through magazines and clubs existing solely for this purpose. Here and there, in cities and towns, the movement has fired educators to break through the stern pedagogical traditions and to bring into the whole building that atmosphere of beauty, a freedom and joy felt in the most refined and love-dominated homes.

Such an atmosphere has Miss Florence Holbrook disseminated in the Forestville school in Chicago. You find yourself asking as you enter its doors, and saunter through the long corridors, "How did she do it, how did she make those boys and girls feel so free and so happy that they trip along through the halls, faces alight with joy, freedom in their every movement with no apparent fear that a 'Be quiet, walk in line, don't speak, hurry to your class!' is going to suppress their joyous spontaneity, and cause them to feel and act in a way they never would in any other place but a schoolroom?"

To be natural, to find our true life, to be independent of luxuries, not to be at the mercy of prejudices and false ideals—that is the secret of life.—Arthur Christopher Benson: The House of Quiet.

A pretty Halloween party was held at the home of Miss Goldie Curry last evening. The color scheme of black and orange was used, while pumpkin faces with their gleaming eyes peeped from every nook and corner. The witch's den was the success of the evening, in which Miss Nell Ridenour, with a magic broom, read the destinies of the many guests and told them the future road to travel. After many of the old-fashioned games, a delightful lunch was served. Those present were Misses Margaret and Lorena Bush, Marie Clancy, Emma Dretzler, Leitha Deamer, Nell Ridenour, Amy and Madge Glenn, Vera Neely, Maud Curry, Rema Clow, Blanche Phillips, Messrs. Jim Kerran, Syd Elliot, Howard Neely, Ross Buggett, Gerald Fess, W. Reams, Lyle Curry, John Fauner, and Tom Kirkpatrick of Newark.

Everybody is asked to buy a flower and wear it tomorrow, when approached by the high school girls, who will sell roses to aid the Lima instructive visiting nurse fund. Early in the morning they will canvass the business district and be on the streets with arms full of pretty flowers. Every penny goes to the nurse fund.

Helpers are desired all next week at the headquarters of the society in the former Delsel grocery on West Market street, to place the pledges in envelopes and pass these from house to house. Because the nurse association and these volunteers are doing this work themselves this year instead of mailing the letters, about $100 will be saved.

If you can help, even one day, please telephone Miss Frances Maire or Miss Katherine Reilly.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Pennell gave their lovely home on West Market street for the Halloween party of the Trinity Epworth league Wednesday evening. Witches, black cats, pumpkins and all the things favoring of Halloween were used in decorating the rooms. This social was held mainly for the promoting membership, 65 new members being added to the organization. They were signed up by a committee of four girls, the Misses Ollie Bliss, Rowena Kahle, Clara Bell and Lura Mae Galliespie. Although the competition was close, Miss Ollie Bliss received the prize. It was decided to hold regular monthly meetings after this. Refreshments concluded the meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Hover, of West Spring street, will entertain the members of the University club at their home this evening. After dinner, which will be served at 6:30, an excellent program will be given. The new officers for the year, with Mrs. George Hall as president, will preside at this meeting.

Members of the Ladies Aid society of the First Lutheran church will give a masquerade social at the home of Mrs. T. B. Johns, of 402 South MacDonell street, this evening.

Miss Mazie Arbutnot and Mr. Lloyd Moll were married yesterday at 2 o'clock at the home of the Rev. I. N. Thomas. The bride, attired in navy blue broadcloth suit and black velvet hat was accompanied by Miss Audrey Akerman, and the bridegroom was accompanied by Mr. John Reun. Mrs. Jennie Arbutnot and Mrs. Mary Moll, mothers of the young couple, were also present at the ceremony. Later Mr. and Mrs. Moll left for a week in St. Louis, Chicago and Indianapolis, and after their return will be at home to their friends at 135 South Vine street.

Social and Literary club members were entertained yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Samuel Burden, at her home on Atlantic avenue. Roll call was answered with short stories about Halloween. Mrs. Bertha John opened the program with an interesting paper and was followed by Mrs. Frank Hagerman, who read an interesting paper on travels. A contest played was won by Mrs. Mabel Gohel. Mrs. Frank Mason was the only guest of the club. The club will meet again in two weeks at the home of Mrs. Gohel.

Miss Helen Thompson is studying music at Cincinnati will return this evening to spend the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Thompson. She will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McGuire, Miss Dorothy Barrett and Mr. Patterson Pogue, all of Cincinnati.

Members of the E. C. T. club were entertained yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Clayton Donze. Needlework was the afternoon's diversion at the conclusion of which a delectable lunch was served. Halloween decorations were used throughout the house. Mrs. F. M. Fockler assisted the hostess during the afternoon.

Mrs. John S. Wolfe entertained the members of the L. F. D. club and their husbands last evening at dinner. Black and yellow colors were effectively carried out with Jack o' lanterns, candles, nut baskets, place cards and chrysanthemums. After the dinner contests were played, the prizes being won by Mrs. B.

Schlott and Mr. Ronald McCarty. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. H. A. Loser. The club will again meet in two weeks at the home of Mrs. John Mack.

Hints for the Housewife

The proper method of crumbing and frying croquettes having been given in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor, possibly a few recipes for the concocting of various croquettes may be helpful to the housekeeper. Many of these utilize leftovers in a most appetizing way.

Bean Croquettes—Cold baked kidney beans are used for this mixture. Press through a sieve enough of the beans to make a pint of pulp. Add 1/2 teaspoon of salt, a dash of pepper and 1 tablespoon of butter. Mix well, add 2 lightly beaten eggs, and sufficient bread crumbs to make the mixture thick enough to roll. Shape into balls, or any form desired, and drop in deep fat.

Veal Croquettes—Grind enough cold fried veal, left from a preceding meal, to fill one cup. Make a cup of thick white sauce by blending 1 tablespoon of flour with 3 tablespoons of butter in 1 cup of milk, and add to it 1/2 cup of bread crumbs, 1/2 teaspoon of onion juice, 1 tablespoon each of chopped celery and parsley, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, and the chopped meat. Mix thoroughly and, when cold, shape as desired—cone, square, cylinder or round—then dip in egg and crumbs and fry in deep hot fat until brown and heated throughout.

Chicken Croquettes—To 1 1/2 cups of thick white sauce (3 tablespoons of flour, 4 tablespoons of butter, and 1 1/2 cups of liquid), add 2 cups of chopped cold chicken, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, 1/2 teaspoon of celery salt, a speck of cayenne pepper, 2 teaspoons of lemon juice, and, if desired, a few drops of onion juice. Mix well, set in the refrigerator until very cold, then mold into tiny chickens; or merely in cones or balls, if preferred. Egg and crumb and fry in deep hot fat.

Savory Rice Croquettes—Cook together for 20 minutes, 1 cup of rice, a slice of onion, a sprig of parsley, 1 clove, a small piece of red pepper, 1/2 cup of stock or water, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, 1/2 cup of grated cheese, 1/2 tablespoon of butter. Put through a sieve and add 1 cup of cooked rice, mix well, then add 1 egg well beaten. Shape into croquettes, egg and crumb, and fry as usual.

Macaroni Croquettes—Cook 1/2 package for 20 minutes in salt water until it is tender, then drain and chop fine. Heat 1 cup of milk, and when hot, stir into it a paste made from 1 tablespoon of butter and 2 tablespoons of flour. Add 1/2 teaspoon of salt, a dash of pepper, and cook until thickened, stirring all the time. Beat the yolk of 1 egg well, and gradually pour on to it the hot milk mixture. Return to the double boiler and cook a few minutes longer. Add the chopped macaroni, remove from the fire, and, when cool, shape. Beat the white of 1 egg slightly, dip the croquettes first in crumbs, then in egg white, then in crumbs again. Fry in deep hot fat to a golden brown. Serve with cheese sauce, made as follows: Melt 1/2 tablespoon of butter, add 1/2 tablespoon each of flour and grated cheese, and stir all together. When well mixed, add 1 cup of milk. Heat, stirring constantly, until it comes to the boiling point, then serve on the croquettes.

Men Can Never Understand Why Women Dote on Weepy Plays

Neither Can They Imagine, Says Dorothy Dix, Why They Revel in Soulful Love Scenes on the Stage—But Neither Can Their Wives Appreciate Their Husbands' Strange Liking for Musical Comedy and Minstrel Shows.

A LARGE, fat lady, with three emotional looking chins, sat near me in the street car the other night. Beside her was a small, thin, disgruntled appearing man. They had been to the theater, and the husband asked the wife how she enjoyed the play. "Oh, I was disappointed in it," said the woman, "everybody told me it was so sad you could just weep yourself to death over it, and I didn't shed a single tear."

Most Husbands and Wives Differ Violently in Their Choice of Good Plays.

The husband turned upon his wife an eye of withering disgust, and murmured sardonically, "And that's your idea of spending a pleasant evening! Heavens, what DO women want in a play!"

No one can answer this question. Otherwise theatrical managers would all be millionaires, because women are the mainstay of the stage, and if a play pleases women it doesn't make much difference whether it pleases the men. The women will flock to see it and drag their men along with them.

Generally speaking, however, the psychological difference between men and women is more marked in the difference between the kind of plays they like than in any other particular. Women's taste in drama runs one way and men's another, and probably the reason that more men don't take their wives to the theater oftener is because there is nearly always a faint spat about what they should go to see, and one or the other of the party is bored by having to sit through a performance that does not appeal to his or her taste.

Nearly all men, for instance, adore musical comedies, while few women care for them at all. When a woman goes to a musical comedy she generally goes to please a man and because he is paying for the tickets, and to see what the chorus have got on—or have left off.

Men Play To Be Amused, but Women Really Love to Weep Themselves Dry.

Same way with farces. Men laugh their heads off at the antics of a drunkard on the stage, who falls over his feet and drops down in a sudden heap on the floor, and they enjoy nothing more than a broad comedy which depicts the ease with which an unfaithful husband deceives his elderly wife. Women see nothing funny in these plays. For them such dramas are not punctuated with laughs, but with the sobs of the thousands of heartbroken wives. But it is true that the average man always wants to go to see a play that will make him laugh, whereas women prefer plays that will make them weep. Goodness knows why women enjoy sniffling in public, and paying for the privilege of shedding tears at a theater when they've got plenty of troubles that the can weep over without cost at home, but they do.

Any tear-soaked drama will run indefinitely and probably a woman's definition of what constitutes a delightful play is one at which she soaks three handkerchiefs and comes away from powdering her nose and wiping her eyes.

Also, women are strong for romance and plays in which a good-looking man in perfectly fitting evening clothes, pops the question to a beautiful heroine in a soulful manner.

It is the sad, sad secret of every woman's life that men are short on romance and that they muffle the ball when they make love. A man means well, and his proposal is a perfectly good business proposition that the woman is only too glad to accept, but it breaks her heart because he makes it in the wrong way.

He suggests, and gasps, and threatens to choke, and then blurts out a few commonplace words, instead of murmuring poetic things, and gently drawing her to his manly bosom without mussing her back hair as the matinee hero does on the stage. That's why women pay out good money to see a real first-class, workmanlike job of lovemaking.

Men Like Minstrel Shows, and Women Revel in an Ibsen Problem Play.

It is because the only romance that most women ever encounter is what they see on the stage that gives the saccharine play its vogue. And by the same token, the reason that women like this kind of play is the reason that men loathe it. It must make the average man squirm in his orchestra chair to see Otis Skinner, or John Drew, or Tavenham make love, and remember the way in which he proposed to his own Maria.

The ordinary man seldom likes a problem play, either. It isn't his idea of spending a joruous evening having his soul torn to shreds by the suffering of a Magdalene. On the other hand, women, who are vivisectionists by nature, revel in probing into the heart secrets of the miserable and those who have made a general mess of life.

That is why women flock to Ibsen and Sudermann plays, while the average man takes the position of the Western dramatic critic who "ound up a review of 'Ghosts' by saying that undoubtedly it was a grand and masterly piece of work, but, thank God, Dicksader's ministrals come to town next week.

Likewise, women are strong for plays that teach moral lessons. They make of the theater their church, and of the actors their moral teachers. While men want just the opposite—something that will not make them think but that will rest their minds after the strenuous work of the day (something pleasant and light and diverting—something away from the worries and anxieties that

ORPHEUM PRESENTS RARE COMEDY BILL

Handless Billiard Expert

Adds to Interest of Good Program.

"Preparedness," a comedy sketch, by Nichols and Croix, is billed as the headliner at the Orpheum the last half of the week, and it is an excellent burlesque on the preparedness agitation of the present day. Hubby neglects everything in order that he may be prepared when his country calls him. His wife very patiently runs the house on nothing for he cannot be bothered with bills and mercenary affairs when his country needs him. When the invaders finally come, hubby has a very bad attack of rheumatism and wily shoulders the gun and goes to the front.

Handless George Sutton, the miracle man of vaudeville, is certainly a wonder. He runs his own yacht, he motored from New York to Chicago without assistance, he is a champion billiard player, he is a very good writer and a cartoonist and can shoot ten targets in ten seconds. He does everything people with hands can do and many things they cannot do.

Harry Cooper in "The Mail Carrier" is a scream and he has a line of comedy that the audience enjoys. He and his partner are also very good singers. Mar Currie, singing comedienne, is an excellent mimic and has a pleasing personality. Dixon, Bowers and Dixon and Miss Anna Burt are comedians and acrobats. Dixon also plays the violin in a capable manner. A very interesting picture of the Bau Gold Mines in Japan closes the bill.

Amusements

THE FAUROT'S PICTURES.

An absorbing story, with a plausible plot and excellent acting by Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite Skirvin and a well selected cast make "The Upheaval," the new Metro picture at the Faurot mighty good film entertainment. The politics, gossip and municipal activities of a good-sized city, to which is added the triangular love affair of a political boss, his rival and a very pretty girl are the principal ingredients that go to make up the theme of the play. Good photography and tasteful settings add to the general excellence of this feature, which is accompanied by a clever comedy, "At a Premium," which brings out Sidney and Mrs. Drew in humorous roles, and new Paramount Photographs. Last times tonight.

"PHILIPPINE LEGISLATION"

By REPRESENTATIVE WM. A. JONES of Virginia, Chairman, House Committee on Insular Affairs.

The Philippine legislation enacted at the first session of the Sixty-fourth congress is the fulfillment of a democratic pledge first given in the national platform of 1900, and reiterated in each successive platform of that party. Indeed, the language employed to express the purpose of the people of the United States to grant the Philippines their independence as soon as a stable government is established in the Philippine islands, follows almost literally that of the declaration of the Baltimore platform upon this subject, and in the legislative program suggested by President Wilson he strongly urged the redemption of this promise.

The recent Philippine act of congress, is therefore distinctly a democratic measure. Although certain prominent republicans have, in vague and indefinite terms, declared it to be the purpose of their party ultimately to give the Philippines independence, there has never been an authoritative republican declaration upon this subject. The party itself has been as silent as death in respect to the future political status of the Philippine islands.

Viewed either from the standpoint of American or Philippine interests, this democratic legislation is of far reaching and tremendous importance. It is a great triumph for the people of the United States as well as for the Philippine people.

It is not possible to state with accuracy what the Philippines have cost the United States in dollars and cents. President Taft stated in a message to the congress that this was "an insoluble problem." It is safe, however, to affirm that the total cost to the United States for the past 18 years has not been much, if anything, less than a billion dollars. Although difficult of calculation, it can be demonstrated that the Philippines are now costing us annually somewhere in the neighborhood of 40 millions of dollars. Thus it is seen that they, from purely monetary standpoint, are a serious liability to the United States.

More serious, however, than this constant drain upon the revenues and resources of the United States, is the menace which they offer to our peace and prosperity. In the event of war with any class national power, they would constitute our weakest point of attack. That it would be impossible to successfully defend and hold the islands against Japan for instance, is contended on military authority. It cannot, therefore, be denied that the Philippines are a financial or military asset to the United States.

Although the establishment of free trade between the United States and the Philippines in 1909, there has been a marked increase in the trade between the two countries. It cannot be denied that the total value of our trade is, from a commercial standpoint, sufficient to justify holding them at such an enormous cost—namely an annual outlay of $40,000,000.

A statement just issued by the bureau of insular affairs shows that American goods to the value of $24,500,000 were imported into the Philippines during the year ending June 30, 1916. This means that the total value of American products sold to the Philippines during the last year, very little more than equaled one-half the cost of holding the Philippines during that period. In other words if the total value of our exports to the Philippines during the last year had been all clear profit, the cost to the people of the United States would have been very nearly two dollars for every dollar of profit to the producers of these exports. If we reckon the profit upon these exports at fifty per cent, the result is still more astonishing, so that it is easily demonstrable that the Philippines are not a commercial asset. There is no reason to believe, however, that our exporters would lose this trade if the Philippines were given their independence. The bonds of gratitude would bind them to us in the closest ties of political amity and commercial relationship.

But it is not claimed by well informed and fair minded people that the Philippines are now, or will be in the near future, financially a paying proposition. The argument advanced in favor of their permanent retention is that we owe a moral duty, which cannot with honor, be evaded to the nations of the world as well as to Filipinos themselves.

If it be true that the sacrifices which we have made on account of the Philippines have resulted in their immense uplift along educational and material lines, it would seem that we have fully discharged such treaty and other obligations as devolved upon us as the result of the destruction of Spanish dominion over the islands. Then, too, in promising the Filipinos independence, we are not preparing to cast them off, as all the world knows, ardently desire their freedom and independence and are willing to assume every obligation and risk incident thereto.

It is not possible, in an article of this length, to discuss the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government. Since 1907 they have controlled one branch of their legislature, and for the past two or more years, the majority of the Philippine commissioners, constituting the upper branch, have been Filipinos. For years the public service has become more and more Filipinized until now many of the most important positions in the islands are held by Filipinos. For years three out of seven members of the supreme court have been Filipinos and the president of the high tribunal has always been a Filipino. There are today some nine or ten thousand Filipinos teaching English in the public schools, and only recently a Filipino was appointed assistant director of agriculture, another deputy collector of customs and still another to the exceedingly important position of governor of the mountain province, the inhabitants of which are uncivilized non-Christians. But perhaps the most significant of these recent appointments is that of Mr. Jose Echler as first assistant director of education. Mr. Echler in addition to having graduated from one or two other universities, is a master of arts of Yale university. It may be worth of note, too, that each of the 81 members of the Philippine legislature is a university graduate. In enacting this Philippine legislation, the democratic party has but carried into effect the principle, for which it has ever stood, for it was its distinguished founder and its greatest exemplar who declared that "Every man and every body of men on earth possess the right of self-government."

Our Diet. One fundamental principle is that the diet, considered for any reasonable length of time, must supply a great variety of chemical substances combined in different ways for the "structural" needs of the body, and also must supply it with energy-yielding substances with which it may perform internal and external work. It seems apparent that a varied diet, reasonably generous in amount, is more likely to meet the body needs than one restricted or unvarying in its make-up or scant in quantity.

LOYAL MOOSE WILL STAGE '49 STUNT, ALSO RABBIT HUNT

On November 13 the Moose order will present "The Days of '49." This play was presented two years ago by the same lodge, but this year will be entirely under the direction of local lodge members. It is predicted that the play will be better this year than before.

On November 1, a rabbit hunt will be participated in by members of the lodge. Harold Stump will lead one of the teams and the other will be captained by L. O. Tremper. The losing squad will have to tender a dinner to the winning side.

The Test.

Let me ask you a question: Did you ever, on a freezing winter day, stand precariously in one slippery washbasin while you sponged your shivering self with about a quart of water from another china bowl? If you think you would have persisted in this, morning after morning, in an unheated bedroom, through zero weather, I salute you! You belong to the elect.—The Atlantic.

Sympathetic Chauffeur.

"Confound you!" snarled the injured party. "I was standing with my artificial limb in such a position that the foot thereof projected beyond the curbing, and you have run over said synthetic hoof and broken it. Arr-r-r!" "Why didn't you put your best foot foremost?" flippantly answered the taxicab driver.—Kansas City Star.

See Scored Pity.

Nothing was so miserable about the war as the way in which she refused to be pitied. If a caller started to express his sympathy in her affliction, she laughed at him. "Why, bless your soul," she would say, "I am the happiest woman alive! My slight-ness has brought me unnumbered blessings. If it had not been for that, I should not have written my hymn."

Chintz Covers for Books.

During the summer months, when books are liable to be read out of doors in arm or hammock, and perhaps left there, it is well to make gay little chintz covers to slip on them. These can be easily caught together with feather-stitching in a contrasting shade and will add to the appearance of the book as well as serve to protect it.

LEAPS FROM TRAIN ELUDES OFFICERS; STARTS NORTH AFOOT

Unidentified Man Leads Authorities Merry Chase; Flight Unaccounted For.

After leaping from an open window of a fast moving Pennsylvania passenger train, last night, and causing the city police and fire departments to search for his body for a considerable length of time, an unidentified man went to the National Stone quarry last evening to rest. About seven o'clock this morning he started walking down the C. & D. tracks with the intention of going to Desaler, O. According to word received at police headquarters this morning, the man received only minor injuries. The incident occurred last night.

about 8 o'clock. The train on which he was riding is said to have been speeding at about a rate of 30 miles per hour, when the man leaped from the window. After a trainman standing on the back platform saw the man's body go hurtling through the air he pulled the emergency brake and the train came to a halt. When the train had backed to the spot where the man committed the act it was discovered that only his hat could be found. The man had fled. A search of the surrounding fields, by police and firemen, revealed no trace of the man. However, it was learned this morning that the man was able to be about on his feet.

Water in Farm Homes.
Running water in the kitchen is a hope that many farm women will see realized this year. This is one of the ways by which the "silent partners" are removing drudgery from farm life. Efficiency is the keynote of the day, and the women have found that "packing" water by hand is inefficient, when for a small cost, the water can be piped to faucets in their kitchens. A simple system consisting of a pump attached to the kitchen sink, with pipes and connections, can be installed for $18. The next system, costing about $35, consists of a force pump, kitchen sink with waste pipe, and a tank to which the water is pumped and is ready for use at all times. Another system supplying both hot and cold water can be put in for about $40. Other more elaborate systems with bathroom outfits have been designed for those who want greater comfort. —Farm Progress.

Creation.
To the sum total of the matter and energy of the universe nothing has ever been added, and from them nothing has ever been subtracted. Things are perpetually changing from one form into another—from one form of matter to another form of matter, from one form of force to another form of force—but amidst the eternal transformation nothing is created, nothing annihilated.

ON THE SAND

By LOUISE OLIVER.

The swim out to the sand bar and back six times repeated had made Ted tired. Add to that a scorching July sun, the inviting shade of a beach chair, and a natural propensity for sleep, at any time and under all conditions, and you can readily understand why morpheus found him an easy victim that eventful morning.

Suddenly something hit him with sickening force in the solar plexus. Then something said softly: "Goo!" and, with a few delighted gurgle, "Goo!" again. A baby looked up at him with placid blue eyes and twisted the corners of its little rosebud mouth into a thousand smiles.

"Hello, there, mister or miss or whatever you are!" Ted exclaimed. "Where did you come from?" Baby gurgled an answer. "You don't say so! Well, if you had only sent word I might have been better prepared to receive you. I suppose—" Ted looked around and saw no one who appeared to have lost a baby recently, or who might in any way be associated with one. "I suppose," he said, "that you fell out of the chair, seeing that you had such a nice soft thing to land on!"

"When you smile at me so sweetly, I think you're a girl. The girls all like me to pieces. Honor bright!" The wide-open blue eyes searched him inquiringly. "All except one, and she doesn't think I'm worth two for a cent. But it's all because she doesn't know me. We have never been introduced. By Jove, here she comes now!"

A variety of reasons caused him to pick the baby up just then—either to hide the confusion which he always felt when the girl came near, or because it looked heartless to let a beautiful, embroidered, shell-pink baby lie unprotected on the sand.

The girl passed, but not before she had taken in the stage setting and the chief performers of the little act.

To go back, Ted and the girl were strolling at the same hotel. He had tried to meet her—as he had explained to the baby—but no mutual friend had so far appeared.

The girl walked along with her companion, but turned back as she saw something lying on the sand. Ted's heart nearly stopped when he saw her coming, and he almost dropped the baby, but he clutched it tightly, desperately, when she picked up the toy and handed it to him, with: "Here is your baby's rattle!" and, half-stopping, added: "Cute little thing—looks like you!"

She was gone with that, and Ted suddenly wished the sands would swallow him up and spare him any further torment of living. His baby! Merciful heavens!

He laid baby in its soft nest, gave it the rattle and tried to collect his scattered senses by another swim to the bar. When he returned baby was gone. He breathed more freely then.

Another day Ted came out of a movie just as a woman passed wheeling a baby perambulator. Something flew out of the carriage and landed at his feet. He recognized the blue rattle of his friend, the baby, and handed it over.

"Oh, thank you!" beamed the mother. "She's always throwing it out." She was young and pretty—scarcely more than a girl. It occurred to Ted to relate the episode of the baby's fall, and he did so, suitably stepping to her own.

Of course, the girl passed just then, as the young mother was listening with all attention to Ted.

"Durn!" he exclaimed, stopping.

"I beg your pardon!" He apologized profusely. "I forgot something, and must go back if you will excuse me," he said, as he lifted his hat and turned in the direction the girl had taken.

He followed, unabashed, desperate! Ted came up beside her, and after an irresolute minute spoke: "I should like to talk with you just a minute, if you don't object!"

She looked up. "Object? Well, I'll have to listen, I suppose. Go ahead."

"That baby isn't mine!"

"I know it isn't."

"What! Excuse me—I didn't understand. I thought you thought—"

"He thought, we thought, you thought, they thought," she finished mockingly.

Ted was very red in the face by this time.

"Now listen," said the girl. "I am that baby's aunt. I was only teasing you, so don't worry about it any more."

He digested this. "Why don't you like me?" he went on. "It's been so evident in a hundred ways that you don't. I'm really curious about it. Do you mind telling me?"

"Mercy!" she cried. "I have certainly developed into a regular bureau of information. But I'll tell you that, too! It's because you are here having a good time for a month while George Bronson, your partner, who happens to be my brother-in-law and that baby's father, is at home working his head off in a hot office when he is dying to be here with his family. He can't leave as long as you are away!"

Ted was speechless. "But I'd have gone a week ago if—it hadn't been for you!" he declared suddenly.

Then the girl smiled, the very sort of a smile he wanted to see. "It's wicked for me to keep George away from May and the baby, isn't it?" she said. "I'll go home tomorrow."

"Then I'll go, too," smiled Ted. (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

About the Wedding Ring.
The wedding ring is of gold to signify the nobility and durability of affection. The form is round to imply that love should never end. The place is on the third finger of the left hand, where the ancients thought there was a vein that came directly from the heart, and where it is always in view. The third finger being a finger least used, the ring may be least subject to wearing out.

OBITUARY.

Mary Jane Smith Wonnell, the daughter of Robert and Rebecca Smith, was born in Fairfield county, Ohio, January 5, 1838, and departed this life, October 25, 1916, being aged 78 years, 9 months and 20 days. She, with her parents, moved to Lima when she was eleven years old. She went to school to Professor Washburn and qualified herself to teach school at six teen years of age. She taught a number of terms in Allen and Anguize counties prior to her marriage to Edward Wonnell, December 23, 1858. To this union were born two sons and five daughters; one son, Willie, and one daughter, Emma, having preceded her to the Great Beyond.

She was converted and joined the M. E. church at the early age of 13, of which society she remained a faithful and devoted member throughout her entire life. Her religious nature was strong and asserted itself in many ways. Although not demonstrative, her influence for good was exerted as a neighbor, in the church, in the home and as long as she was in good health, she was either in sympathy with or directly connected with Christian organizations looking to the betterment of humanity. This was especially true as a member of the W. C. T. of this township.

Mother Wonnell has been in failing health for the last two years, but her last illness bore her down rapidly and carried her beyond the line that separates time from eternity at the time state above.

Those who survive to mourn their loss are a bereft husband, one son, A. M. Wonnell, of Cincinnati; Mrs. A. A. Thomas, of Arcadia; Mrs. J. F. Kerr, of Ada; Mrs. C. A. Graham, of Lima; and Miss Nellie Wonnell, who resides at home, six grandchildren; one great grandson, one sister, Mrs. W. T. Lind, of Kansas City, as well as a large number of more distant relatives and friends.

Funeral will be held at Olive chapel Sabbath morning, Oct. 29, at 9.30, the Rev. W. W. Constain pastor in charge. The Rev. John W. Holland, of Lima, a former pastor, will preach the sermon.

To Prevent Blood Poisoning.
When you have a cut, a burn, a bruise or any other kind of injury, paint it with iodine. As soon as injured, dip a toothpick with cotton rolled on the end of it in the iodine and paint over the wound without washing. The iodine will kill all germs in the dirt that gets into the wound while washing only drives the germs further into the flesh. When painted with the iodine, your wound will heal in a clean cloth for a couple of days.

Many Materials in Piano.
Forty-eight different materials are employed in the construction of a piano, which 16 countries are called upon to supply.

The Pirates.
The late George W. Peck, creator of "Peck's Bad Boy," was once condemning the unjust American copyright law. "They get a bad name," he said, "these publishers who steal foreigners' writings. A publisher took me home to dinner at his flat the other evening. In the library the children were making a furious racket. 'What are you doing?' the publisher asked. 'We're playing pirates,' said the oldest boy. 'Pirates?' said I. 'But there's no sea here. How can you be pirates without a sea?' 'Oh, we don't need any sea,' said the boy. 'We're library pirates, like you, pa, ain't we?'"

How and Why I Wrote My First Successful Play

The Evolution of a Child's Curiosity

"THAT AIN'T SAYING THAT HELL BE ANY BIGGER OR BETTER THAN DOLLY MONTROSE IN THE KINGDOM COME."

By CLEVES KINKEAD, author of "Common Clay."

When I was asked to tell how my play was written I thought it rather a staggering question. If any one should know how a play is written it should be the author, but from my own experience, I doubt if even an author, retrospectively, can tell just how his play or book evolved itself into form.

I have wondered why any author undertakes to solve any problem either in a book or a play. I feel sure that this cannot be done, and the playwright who undertakes to do it is taking himself far too seriously. His play is a great deal more likely to be helped by the problem than is the problem to be helped by the play. But the play can contribute its mite toward the problem. It was with this in view that I wrote "Common Clay," absolutely against the advice of every person who saw the manuscript before its completion.

It took five months to write the play which you know as "Common Clay." The manuscript was begun in February, 1914, and produced at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston, the next January. But I can't say after all that it took me five months to write it. It seems to me that I began on it long before I ever learned the rudiments of reading or writing or arithmetic. I can recall very vaguely a winter's morning about twenty-eight years since when I awoke in my home in Louisville, shivering in bed and noted with considerable satisfaction that the housemaid was engaged in making a coal fire in the grate. It did seem such a shame that anybody (and every child of five thinks of himself in terms of grownupness) should have to get up at all, but to arise in the cold of an early winter's morning seemed out of all question. I waited until the fire should heat the room, and as often happens when one has nothing else to do, I began to think. It's a dangerous thing to think. It always makes trouble and work and unhappiness for those who do it. And my thoughts ran in this wise: I wondered who made the fire for the housemaid, but of course I knew that no one had, and then I began to wonder why I had been so carefully taught to take off my hat to one woman, while another was allowed to wait on me. It didn't seem right and I began to feel that "it's a queer world." So I sought enlightenment from my elders. I wanted to know whether or not different classes of humanity were made of different stuff, but from the Presbyterianism and the orthodoxy of several generations of ancestors the answer came in almost biblical terms that we were all of the same common clay or dust or what not to which we return. Whereat I interposed further. I wanted to know why some were recorded a degree of respect not granted to others, and whether or not those of certain classes of humanity who made fires in order that those of other classes might not have to arise in the cold were immune from the effects of the varying changes in the weather. "Oh, they were used to it." That was the answer. But this answer did not exactly satisfy the unprejudiced curiosity of a kid, even though it has added to the complacency of many grown ups who move in the top strata of our present impossible civilization. However, I was left to solve the matter for myself. I have not been able to do so. Any man, be he an economist, a philosopher, a politician or a writer of fiction, takes a lot more on himself than he is capable of doing if he tries to solve anything with any degree of conviction or finality. But in working out matters along the trend of thought, which this and other incidents in succeeding years suggested to me, I blindly stumbled into the theme which is the basis of "Common Clay."

A play is nothing but the evolution of an idea. Of course no one has an idea that he can claim was born all together in his own understanding. Ideas are the result not of any individual thought, but come to an individual as an angle from some current trend of thought.

The plot of a play is an immensely important thing—the most important thing, perhaps—to hold the attention of the playgoer, but the plot is the least difficult thing for the playwright to conceive. The all important thing to him is the characterization—the making of characters so real that an actor can get into them—and this can only be done by what they do and what they say. To my mind it requires far more experience in the world than it does of literary training to do this. It is essential that your play shall be real rather than new. There is nothing especially new in point of emotional or intellectual interests about any plot situation that can be developed. A murder on the stage arouses the same emotion whether it be committed by a cave man's club or by a bomb from a modern aeroplane. And the dramatist who seeks something new in the way of men or women will go far and find little. He might put characters on the stage with sky blue hair and mouse colored ears, but it is doubtful if the audience will have the least understanding of these queer beings—and after all the thing to do is to convey some meaning to the audience. So I am not in the least disturbed by those of the critics who complain that there is nothing startlingly new about "Common Clay." For the only newness that a play may have is some trick of construction—a cheap thing which has only a technical value, and not a literary or a human one.

"YOU MAY ESCAPE TRIAL BY MARRYING THE WOMAN!"

A LETTER FROM THE DEAD

CLEVES KINKEAD

HOSPITAL TRUSTEES EXPRESS GRATITUDE FOR BEEMAN GIFT

Resolution Formally Adopted by Board on Receipt of Sum.

Members of the board of trustees of the Lima city hospital met last evening and adopted the following resolution: "Whereas, B. E. AFRICAN GROSBECKS.

The social grosbecks of South Africa live in large societies. They select a tree of considerable size and literally cover it with a grass roof, under which their common dwelling is constructed. The roof serves the double purpose of keeping off the heat and the rain, and 400 or 500 pairs of birds are known to have the same shelter. The nests in this aerial dwelling are built in regular streets and closely resemble rows of tenement houses.—Exchange.

Find a Use for Cacti.

Since it has been practically demonstrated that valuable gum and varnish can be extracted from the desert cacti of Arizona a refinery for the production of these materials has been erected at Mesa, in Salt river valley. One variety of this plant yields bases for chewing gum and for the manufacture of rubber. Another variety furnishes the principal ingredient for varnish. The crude gums are extracted in the field and carried to the refinery for manufacture. The machines for extracting the gums are moved from place to place, exhausting the supply of cacti in fields severally of 25 miles square.

TAKE OVER PLANT TO BE INCREASED TO $5000,000 CONCERN

New York Financiers Not Afraid of "After the War" Scare.

ALLIANCE, O., Oct. 27.—An announcement was made today of the sale of the Transue-Williams company to Hornblower and Weeks, of New York, a banking and brokerage firm. With the announcement came the statement that the new company would spend a million dollars in improving the plant so as to double its capacity. At present 1200 men are employed in the Transue plant which manufactures drop forgings, chiefly for automobile use.

The purchase price was not announced, but it is understood to have been several times the capitalized stock, which is $1,000,000. The new company will be known as "The Transue-Williams Steel Forging company." On the new board of directors will be C. F. Transue, Alliance, will be general manager, Frank Transue, F. E. Dussell, both of Alliance, William Farnsworth, Cleveland, and Thomas Jones, New York, are other members. Officers will be elected at a meeting in New York next Monday.

The capital stock of the new company is to be $5,000,000. With the exception of a period of three months the old plant has run steadily, day and night, for 20 years.

BAKERS WILL CUT SIZE OF THE LOAF

Jitney Bread to Decrease in Size; Is an Imperative Necessity.

The price of a loaf of bread will not be raised in this city according to the statement of one of the prominent bakers here today, but the weight of the loaf will be cut down each time the price of flour advances.

Owing to the high cost of flour the five cent loaf is being entirely eliminated. When asked why this action was being taken a baker answered, "A loaf of bread at the price of a jitney at the present time would be about as big as a bun."

With the price of flour around the $10 mark bakers claim that their profits are cut to nothing and that by shaving off some of the weight on each loaf with the advance of flour they are still able to operate their business without any loss. Although all bakers in the city have not eliminated the five cent product, it is likely that they will do so within the next week if the present price of flour is maintained.

Hurt Sensitive Customer.
An absent-minded clerk in a San Francisco sporting goods house recently cost the firm a good customer. The buyer asked to see some dog collars, selected one and paid for it. Right there the absent-minded one spoiled it all by asking: "Shall I wrap it up and send it, or will you wear it?"

Appreciation vs. Thanks.
A boy friend of mine, when delivering milk one day took a little three-year-old boy along with him. As they approached one of the customers the lady was giving her children some cookies. Seeing the little fellow, she gave him a cookie also. My boy friend asked him, "What do you say to the lady?" And he said, "I want another one."—Cleveland Leader.

Not the Saleslady's Fault.
Floorwalker—"Do you realize that you were four hours selling those two women a yard of ribbon?" Saleslady—"I know, sir. But just as they got to the counter they discovered that they each had a baby just learning to talk."—Siren.

The Daily Task.
It requires a sound philosophy to do, day after day those accustomed routine things without which men cannot live in society, and the race will be forever indebted to him who shall suggest an infallible method of evading the irksomeness of daily, recurrent, trivial, necessary tasks.—Vogue.

Service.
The aristocracy of the future is in sight. It will not be an aristocracy founded on might; it will not be an aristocracy based on the accident of birth; it will not be an aristocracy by virtue of possession, whether of knowledge or of wealth; but it will be an aristocracy of service.—Matt. S. Hughes.

Value of Bees on the Farm.
A complete farm should have a few stands of bees. They can supply the family with honey, and the surplus will return good profit. Twenty dollars a hive each year can be realized, when proper methods are used and good care given the "hired girls." Bees pay for themselves in insuring perfect pollination in the orchard. Every hive of bees is a nation unto itself. Every farmer would be a better farmer if he kept bees and profited by the lessons they teach.—American Farmer.

YOUNGSTOWN.—Garlin Zagreas, 21, was killed and John R. Barosca, 24, fatally wounded in a gun battle in a saloon here last night.

CENTENNIAL BODY MEETS SATURDAY

A meeting of the Allen County Centennial and Home Coming association will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce.

It is expected that many farmers living in the county will be present at the meeting as some important matters will be discussed. A talk will be delivered by Frank A. Howard, who was a member of the committee in charge of the Fort Wayne centennial.

More than 500 students took part yesterday in Field day held at the Driving park under the direction of Principal Schweickart of Lima high school.

Nature, the meditative man of the world seems to say, has no necessary contact with pain, and yet willingly assumes the burden. Wood Submits a Couple of Early Baseball Scores

The scores the old timers—and the youngsters, asked for were those covering the memorable games between the Chicago White Stockings of 1870 which Mr. Wood organized, captained and managed, and the famous Cincinnati Red Stockings.

The requests were turned over to Mr. Wood, who was kind enough to dig through his papers and turn over copies of the box scores to the writer. It will be noticed that the scores show only runs, hits (1b) and total bases. That is because those games were played in the era before the present elaborate box scores came into vogue.

Also it will be seen that the name of the home club is on top of the final tabulation. As previously explained by Mr. Wood, the visiting team always had last bat until along in the early 90s.

The tabulation shows how the White Stockings led all the way in the first game, but, in the second came from behind with amazing rally, and nosed out the team which a year before had gone through the season unbeaten, thus giving to the White Stockings the base ball championship.

Here are the scores:

Legore Starring.

One of the safest little bets right now is that Harry Legore, of Yale, will be almost unanimously chosen as an all-American back, unless somebody renders him hors de foot ball.

The Eli backfield man has started in every department of play so far; he has played a magnificent game defensively and been superb on offense. He is fast, tricky, brainy, courageous—and more. He was almost universally named in 1914 for the top honors in football and so far he stands out superior to every rival.

Four Big Games Scheduled in East.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The football enthusiasts of the east today await impatiently the blast of the whistles that will start at least four stellar battles in various arenas tomorrow.

Mas.

The big battles are:

Harvard vs. Cornell at Cambridge.

Yale vs. Washington and Jefferson, at New Haven

Pittsburgh vs. Pennsylvania at Pittsburgh.

Princeton vs. Dartmouth at Princeton.

Even money is being laid today on the Harvard-Cornell clash; 10 to 6 that Yale beats W. & J.; 2 to 1 that Pitt triumphs over Pennsylvania and 10 to 6 that Princeton will beat Dartmouth.

Each of the rival squads went through final light workouts today. The Pennsylvania team arrived in Pittsburgh during the morning and at once hustled to the Panther field to acquaint themselves with turf conditions and get final instructions in the trick plays that are expected to feature their work.

The W. & J. aggregation, 22 strong, arrived in New York en route to the Yale bowl, and had its last practice in Van Cortlandt Park in the afternoon. Dartmouth and Cornell also will get in the last signal drill work on the field of the enemy.

EVERYBODY IS INVITED TO ATTEND THE REFORMATION JUBILEE, SUNDAY EVENING AT 7:30 IN MEMORIAL HALL. ELOQUENT ADDRESS, THRILLING MUSIC. ADMISSION FREE.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Mrs. Emma Green bases her suit for a divorce from her husband on the ground that he often called her a "low brow."

LEADING THE ARMY GRIDIRON WARRIORS

Capt. McEwan, the giant center of the Army foot ball team.

The West Pointers are now busily engaged in getting ready for the annual conflict with the Navy on November 25. Other games will be played in the meantime, but the Navy game is the only one which counts with the soldier boys.

Yale Scores.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 27.—

The Yale eleven had an easy time scoring two touchdowns yesterday. Legore and Braden each got across the 1920 goal on short line plunges. Legore's 45-yard run, bringing the ball to the freshmen one-yard mark, featured.

It is practically certain that Braden will play full against W. & J. Saturday.

Harvard Loses a Tackle

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 27.—Mosely Taylor, Harvard's 200 pound tackle, has thrown his shoulder out and will not be able to get into practice again for a fortnight. He will not be able to play against Princeton and will be lucky if his injury heals in time for him to take part in the contest with Yale.

The Cornell team will arrive in town today. After luncheon they will practice in the stadium for two hours in preparation for tomorrow's game.

On Injured List.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 27.—Head Coach Rush yesterday gave the Princeton squad another long and hard scrimmage before the Dartmouth game Saturday.

Rush's team will go into the game minus the services of Latrobe and Moore who are still on the injured list. McGraw will play in Latrobe's place.

White Wins.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27.—Chick Hayes, of Indianapolis, outpointed by Jabez White in 12 rounds here last night.

Dillon in Quandry Over a Guarantee

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—The Jack Dillon-Mike Gibbons bout which is scheduled for November 17 at St. Paul, is doing another of its on-again, off-again stunts. This time it is the New York boxing commission which is responsible. It seems that Dillon signed to meet Al McCoy in Brooklyn next week. It also seems he put up a $1,000 forfeit guaranteeing not to engage in any bout for two weeks before the Gibbons bout. The New York commission now threatens to bar him unless he battles McCoy. The St. Paul promoters say he will lose the $1,000 if he does. Dillon does not know which way to jump.

Automatic Fine.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 27.—Southern Association players who are chased out of the game by umpires next season automatically will be fined $10, according to announcement by President Robert H. Daugh.

Coulon Matched.

RACINE, Wis., Oct. 27.—Johnny Coulon, former bantam champion, has been offered a match here with Frankie Izzo, of Chicago.

Independents to Line Up Against Toledo Sunday

The curtain will be rung down on the 1916 base ball season for the Lima Independent club next Sunday when they meet the fast Toledo Rail Lights at Murphy street park. The contest will without doubt prove one of the most interesting that has been played this season as each of the squads have reached their zenith in perfection.

Although the Lima aggregation has been defeated twice this season by the fast Toledo squad, the locals feel that they have just as good a club as their opponents and will give the visitors an extra hard battle Sunday afternoon. The first contest of the season between the two clubs was won by the visitors by a rather decisive score. However, the second game almost took the visitors off their feet and the locals were finally nosed by a score of 3-2.

McCluskey, who twirled the contest for the Independents, will be on the firing line again in the game Sunday and according to indications will be in the best of condition for the gruelling game. The line-up of the visitors will be intact.

Leagues On Brink of Chaos

By Frank G. Menke.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The American and National leagues today are on the brink of warfare.

Right now it seems that nothing can avert a serious clash except an apology from Ban Johnson for his many verbal attacks upon the National league during the past two years. And he never has been known to back down from any stand he has taken. Johnson's most recent criticism of the older organization concerning the John McGraw incident aroused John K. Tener to anger and the National league president is quoted as having heatedly said:

"Ban Johnson should wash his

Preparedness

One result of our educational work during the past twelve years has been to influence thousands of people like yourself, to accumulate a cash surplus during periods of prosperity, and invest it at 7% in conservative preferred stocks.

As a measure of personal preparedness against hard times, there is nothing better than the purchase of the 7% preferred stocks we market, which have splendid dividend records.

Habits of personal extravagance are easy to form, but hard to break. Before committing yourself to new expenditures, read "The Selection of Investments" and "Non-Taxable Income," and then face this question squarely:

"Will you fritter away your surplus for non-productive purposes—or invest it safely at 7% in an established and productive industry?"

Ask us to send you the above booklets and resolve to study them carefully. They will help you to answer wisely.

Aladdin's Cave Outdone.
Half way up the Shenandoah valley are the Luray caverns, an underworld palace built by the busy hands of trickling waters, the National Geographic Magazine says. Aladdin, we are told, was once permitted to enter a cave which exhibited such decorations that its glory both dazzled and affrighted. But Aladdin never beheld anything more wondrously exquisite than the water-built architecture of Luray. The throne room is canopied with curtains woven of diamonds and pearls. The Saracen's tent has more than oriental splendors of richest damasks and golden samite, which drape the crystal couch in festoons of magic beauty. Titania's veil is woven of petrified spiders' web, while the ball-room seems as if to celebrate a marriage between the gods. The visitor to Luray today shares the sentiment of another visitor of long ago, who exclaimed "Mortal hath not made the like, nor human fancy conceived a thing more magnificent!"

VALUE OF READING.

There is perhaps nothing that has a greater tendency to decide favorably or unfavorably respecting a man's intellect than the question whether or not he is impressed with an early love of reading. Books gratify and excite our curiosity in innumerable ways. They force us to reflect. In a well written book we are presented with the maturest reflections or the happiest flights of a mind of uncommon excellence. It is impossible that we can be much accustomed to such companions without attaining some resemblance to them.—William Goodwin.

SAFETY VALVES OF WORLD.

Terrific as are the forces of volcanic action, they have served and do yet serve their ordained purpose in the magnificent scheme of cosmic development. Volcanoes form a natural vent for the pentup internal forces resulting from the slow cooling and consolidation of the earth's mass. They act as the safety valves of the world, without which the crust of the earth would in all probability burst with explosive force and with a resulting cataclysm appalling to contemplate. Volcanoes tend, in fact, to maintain the normal, stable equilibrium between the interior and the outer surface of the world.

GERMAN DAILY IS VIGOROUS IN ITS HUGHES CHARGES

Shows G. O. P. Leader Up as Foe of Working Class.

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—The Chicago Arbeiter-Zeitung in an editorial says:

"The German-American alliance tries hard to paint their candidate in the most pretty colors. They show a picture of him that may look all right under the spot light of the stage, but it loses all its pretty color effect in the merciless light of the day. Thus, if one comes to see the real Hughes, that much lauded candidate with the noble and beautiful qualities, there is nothing left but just a common reactionary, but of the most sinister sort.

"First of all, they praise him as the 'great friend of labor'—the 'ethical friend,' of course. The real hard facts show up this 'friend of the laboring man, as one of the worst enemies of labor. His activities in the judgment of the Danbury hat-makers' strike case has branded him with the mark of Cain, of which he will never be able to rid himself. And a working man who sees this man branded with the mark of Cain and yet votes for Hughes, deserves to have to go through hard times, for he has voluntarily given his oath to an enemy of labor.

"There is another indictment against Hughes destroying the legend of the 'Great friend of the workingman Hughes. Hughes has publicly declared himself against the eight-hour day, and if anyone does that, he ceases, according to the conception of the laboring men, to be a laboring man's friend.

"Hughes further declares to be in favor of arbitration courts and would like to see the right of the working man to strike done away with. That fits exactly his attitude in the Danbury hat-makers' strike.

"And this foe of labor they ask us German-American workingmen to vote for? They would deserve a thrashing if they did."

FIRE STATION BIDS ARE ALL TOO HIGH

Use for Old Newspapers. Old newspapers are invaluable. After the garbage can has been emptied "line" the pan with two or three thicknesses of newspapers. The garbage man will empty papers and contents. Saves scrubbing the can and keeps it clean. Line the pan under the burners of gas stove with newspapers. There is no danger of the paper catching fire, and the paper catches the burned matches, grease, etc., and may be removed frequently without having to wash the pan.

MASSELLON—A deep sorrow has befallen the village of Navarre. The citizens as well as the village itself has been in mourning since Tuesday evening when "Jim," a white horse, 36 years old, in the dray business in Navarre for the past 16 years, was chloroformed because of his infirmities.

INSTEAD OF VAGUE GENERALITIES FROM THE M-O ADVOCATES.

Ask for a showdown.

Make the municipal-ownership backers display their cards.

Don't listen to any assertions that are not backed up by proof.

Then you cannot make a mistake.

What promises does municipal ownership extend? Pick them to pieces and see just how much there is to the scheme.

When those who want Lima to own the telephone system tell you that their scheme will lower the rates, they neglect to add that:

1. Increased taxes will exceed the difference.

2. As soon as the political appointees get a chance to wreck the plant, the rates will have to go up.

3. The loss of business through the loss of long distance and rural service will exceed any temporary rate decrease a hundredfold.

4. Increased expenditures in the maintenance department, due to collusion between employees and salesmen has a chance never offered by a private company.

5. Favoritism, in the matter of rebates, exemptions and failure to collect, common results in municipal ownership, has a chance no private company will tolerate. Look over the books of the water works for a decade or so and see.

All of these factors will affect the tax rate—remember that when you hear talk about the 'phone rate.

The two would be combined under municipal ownership.
